Governor May Halt Execution

Bruno's Lawyers After Eleventh-Hour Decision to Save Lindy Baby-Killer From Shadow of Electric Chair

TRENTON, N.J., Jan. 15.—Governor Harold G. Hoffman announced today through his press aide, William Conklin, that he had "reached no decision" on the question of a reprieve for Bruno Hauptmann. Hauptmann, already a two-time loser in federal courts, signed today a new application in a federal proceeding to escape execution Friday night for the Lindbergh baby murder.

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 15.—Bruno Hauptmann's lawyers sought an eleventh-hour reprieve today to snatch the man convicted as the Lindbergh baby killer from the shadow of the electric chair. The attorneys, losing in federal habeas corpus proceedings, planned to apply to Governor Harold G. Hoffman today.

There were definite indications, one of them said, that a reprieve would halt the electrocution, set for 8 p.m., Friday. Reports concerning a reprieve, constantly in the background for several days, gained wide circulation after a long night conference of defence counsel. Earlier the attorney-general, David T. Wilentz, said he was "reliably informed" the governor would grant a reprieve.

The governor, who three days ago said he possessed "plenty of precedents" for a reprieve, has declined all comment on the case.

TRENTON, N.J., Jan. 15—Counsel for Bruno Richard Hauptmann, convicted slayer of the Lindbergh baby, filed a habeas corpus appeal to a federal court, was reported upon reliable authority last night to be "expecting" an executive reprieve within 24 hours while one member of the staff announced they had "no assurances" of such action.

Asked the possibility of a reprieve, Frederick A. Pope of defence counsel said: "I couldn't find the governor tonight." and C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defence attorney, said Governor Harold Hoffman had given "no assurances" to them he would delay the execution set for Friday night.

But coupled with the report, from a source close to the defence attorneys, that they anticipated an early reprieve was the statement earlier of Attorney General David Wilentz that he had been "reliably informed" the governor would act in behalf of the man condemned to die for the Lindbergh baby kidnap-murder.

Governor Hoffman could not be reached for comment.

Hospital Nurse Declaims Against Treatment of Ann Hewitt

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 15.—Miss Anne B. Lindsay, white-haired nurse who attended Ann Cooper Hewitt at the time the girl was sterilized in an operation sanctioned by her mother, Wednesday described the operation as "totally unwarranted and the cruelest thing imaginable."

Miss Lindsay is one of three nurses who attended the young heiress. The nurses have filed affidavits in connection with the one-half-million-dollar damage suit of the girl against her mother and three others.

"Ann was a virginal, innocent child when they brought her into the hospital," said Miss Lindsay. "She was no more a moron or feeble-minded than I am.

"I was on the case from the outset—from Aug. 18, 1934, when Ann was brought in until Sept. 8, when she went home.

"Regardless of any insinuations or statements to the contrary, I know the child was not overcome. As to her mental condition, the poor little thing had been so crushed and brow-beaten and retarded, she lacked education in every-day school subjects. But she has a good mind and a marvelously retentive memory.

DETROIT, Jan. 15—Seventeen-year-old Shirley Tapp's trance-like sleep, which physicians said was induced by religious hysteria, ended last night a few minutes before she would have entered the seventh day.

TORONTO, Jan. 15—A grand jury at the winter assizes today brought in a true bill charging Harry O'Donnell with the murder of Ruth Taylor, 20-year-old stenographer, whose ravished body was found Nov. 5 in an east end ravine.

There was no immediate indication what day O'Donnell's trial would begin. The murder trial of Alwynne Thompson, accused of slaying his wife, Viola, is now in its third day.

TODAY'S ODDEST NEWS

NOW IT'S BRIDEGROOM WHO BLUSHES MOST

CHICAGO, Jan. 15—Now it's the bridegroom who blushes while the bride fumbles for the marriage license fee.

Sidney Summerfield, head of the Cook county marriage license bureau, said Wednesday shy brides are as rare as cigar store Indians.

"There's an old-timer in the department who remembers a nervous, flushed young lady, but that was back in the days when 'Oh, you kid' was a funny crack," he said. "The blushing bridegroom is the modern note."

Unromantic statistics show a 50 per cent increase in the number of matrimonial admission tickets paid for by women, Summerfield said. He couldn't say whether the fact women were willing to pay accounted for a drop from 26 to 23 in the average age of male applicants. The average for women dropped, too from 22 to 19.

CALGARY CHAMBER ABOMINABLE PLACE

CALGARY, Jan. 15.—"Of all the abominable places I have ever been in, this is the worst," Alderman R. H. Weir complained at a city council meeting. The chamber was blue with tobacco smoke and the temperature was high.

"Sometimes we are frozen, sometimes we suffocate," the alderman said. Mayor Davison promised to have the city clerk look into the complaint.

CROWDS HALT TO INSPECT AUTO OF 1902 VINTAGE

SAULTE STE. MARIE, Ont., Jan. 15.—The Sault's oldest automobile, a machine of 1902 vintage, chugged along Queen street under its own power yesterday and when Fireman Jack Cottenden, its owner, stopped to give it a rest traffic was held up as the curious inspected the ancient model. The car has not been operated for some years but Mr. Cottenden spent the past several weeks getting its motor in shape.

JUDGES HEAR EIGHT CASES

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—Six red-robed judges of the Supreme Court of Canada today began hearing the most important constitutional appeal in the court's history. The validity of eight Dominion laws, passed in 1934 and 1935 by the Bennett government, was under review.

N. W. Rowell, representing the Dominion, led off with discussion of the law establishing criminal code offences of imprisonment for unfair trading practices as a result of the Mass Buying Commission.

The Dominion contended the law was valid, the provinces claimed it was not.

PUBLIC BANK

The delegations endorsed the proposal to make the Bank of Canada a publicly-owned institution instead of privately-owned as it is now constituted.

Other recommendations called for enforcement of highway safety, building and longshore regulations to protect workers from accident and fire prevention.

Representation of labor on all appointed bodies dealing with the lives of wage earners, proclamation of the new Shipping Act, further postponement of any subsidized immigration scheme, were asked.

No Conditions Are Attached to $2,000,000 Obligation, But Must Get Loan Council Approval in Borrowings for New Expenditures.

By THOS. WAYLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, Jan. 15. — The Dominion government, to preserve the credit of all the provinces and of the Dominion, has advanced money to the Province of Alberta with which to meet a maturing loan of $2,000,000 today. No strings were attached to the loan, despite the fact that Premier Aberhart was afraid Alberta's autonomy would be affected by the proposed loan councils which his own province in addition to all the others, have agreed to.

Alberta did not need the whole two million, but Hon. Charles Dunning in making public this morning the fact that the Dominion had gone to Alberta's aid, did not state how much Alberta did need.

From other sources it is reported that the province had $400,000 towards the $2,000,000, which would obtain the provision by the Dominion of $1,600,000.

To a press conference this morning Mr. Dunning said:

"Arrangements have been made to take care of Alberta's maturity partly by Dominion government assistance. It is done in the general interests of the country and the provinces. To allow any province to default two days after the principle of the loan council had been agreed upon and before the machinery is in existence, would be bad for everybody."

"Did Alberta accept any conditions?" Mr. Dunning was asked.

"There are no conditions," he replied.

SITUATION IMPROVED

Mr. Dunning referred to telegrams and messages he had received this morning from financial authorities which indicated that the acceptance by all the provinces of his loan council scheme had so improved the situation that when British Columbia and Saskatchewan go to the money market in the next few months to meet their maturities they may not need any dominion assistance.

Once the National Loan Council had been set up it would co-ordin-

Roosevelt Is Likely To Sign Soldier Bonus

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15—An authority high in Democratic councils said today it was a "pretty good bet" President Roosevelt would sign the United States senate "baby bond" bonus measure.

Preferring not to be quoted by name, this official also predicted the senate would pass the bill this week with only 18 votes or less in opposition.

The Democratic authority contended for the time being the bonus would cost nowhere near the $2,000,000,000 mentioned as some sources. The bill is expected to go before the senate Thursday.

MOTHER TAKES 3 BABES FROM BURNING HOME

One Dies Later, and Another May Not Recover —Heroic Deed

DRUMHELLER, Jan. 15.—Mrs. Beatrice Offrey, wife of Paul Offrey, a miner, played a heroic role Tuesday when she dashed into the smoke-filled, blazing home, gathered in three young children in her arms and brought them outdoors, rolling the burning bodies of the unconscious children in the deep snow before collapsing herself as neighbors rushed to her assistance.

Her heroism was unavailing however as six-year-old Ceaseelene, eldest of the three children succumbed late Tuesday afternoon, while baby Rodger, three years old, youngest of the little family, died early this borning.

BABE STILL FIGHTS

Paul, five-year-old child, still fights for life, but he hangs on the brink, Dr. S. R. Megregor, who has been attending the children, giving the youngster only a fifty-fifty chance to conquer the shock and body burns.

Father Paul Offrey remained at the Drumheller hospital until late last night and was back again this morning, anxious yet fearful of the periodical reports brought to him by nurses.

Mrs. Offrey's condition is reported to be slightly improved this morning but danger of complications are not yet over. So far, news of the death of the two children have been kept from her, as physicians fear her distraught condition may bring on the premature birth of her baby soon.

The Offrey family is now quite destitute, having only the slim

NORTHLAND HAS 62 BELOW ZERO

It was a trifle chilly in the north Wednesday morning—a mere 62 below zero at Fort Vermilion, 50 below at Keg River and a range from there down to a comparatively mild 10 below at Hudson's Hope, throughout the upper half of the northern portion of the province.

Edmonton's minimum during the night was 7 below, with the reading 13 below at 9:00 a.m.

The forecast, influenced by the frigid wave to the north, is for continued cold, with the barometer steady at 27.71.

An added sheet was spread on the already thick bed of snow lying over the city Tuesday night. A half inch of new snow fell over areas served by the government telegraph wires.

Transcontinental U.S. Air Liner Plunges Into Swamp: 17 Are Killed

GOODWIN, Ark., Jan. 15.—Hurtling into an eastern Arkansas swamp a transcontinental air liner last night carried 17 persons to swift death and wrote the most tragic chapter of North American airplane travel.

Air line officials today hastened plans to remove the bodies of five women and a dozen men from the mire of a wooded marshland near here.

Simultaneously company and United States government officials launched investigations to determine the cause of the tragedy which was one of the most baffling of airplane disasters as well as the worst in point of lives lost.

The luxurious Douglas twin motored ship, en route from New York to Los Angeles, left Memphis about 9 o'clock (C.S.T.) last night for Little Rock, 55 minutes away, but about 25 minutes later it had ripped down into the trees and mud where it lay until midnight when a band of five volunteer searchers found it.

IN GOOD SHAPE

The "Southerner" took off with its 14 passengers, two pilots and stewardess in good weather and apparently was in good mechanical shape. Radio communication between the base and its ground stations was maintained until four or five minutes before the estimated time of the crash.

The last report was an "all well" sent from 3,000 feet at 7:18.

The department of commerce and operators of the line which began service over this particular route just a year ago Tuesday sought to find in the shredded remains of the big plane a clue as to what happened in those fateful few minutes which sent the liner to destruction.

BODIES SCATTERED

The bodies were scattered for more than 100 yards through the swamp, which was difficult of access.

The plane was literally torn to pieces, its luxurious cabin ripped

Royal Bank Of Canada 67th Annual Meeting

Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director, Sees Upward Trend of Business Definitely Established

Sydney G. Dobson, General Manager, Reports $50,000,000 Increase in Deposits for Second Year in Succession

Basis for optimism for the immediate future is to be found in the accomplishments of the past two years, stated Mr. Morris W. Wilson, President and Managing Director, in the course of his address at the 67th Annual Meeting of The Royal Bank of Canada.

"In every province of Canada", said Mr. Wilson, "the improvement in conditions has reduced unemployment and created increased purchasing power. To the farmers of the west, there is an almost immeasurable difference between a price of 40c and 90c for wheat, and there is every prospect that by the end of the crop year, the carryover will be materially reduced. In the cities, the burdens and distress due to unemployment have been reduced by an expansion in all lines of manufacturing. In fact, in recent months the output of manufacturing has exceeded that in the normal base year 1926."

Marked expansion in the automobile and allied industries, the chemical industry, in the demand for textiles and boots, were also noted by Mr. Wilson, who considered that the sustained activity in the mining industry during the depression with expansion in 1934 - 1935 have been outstanding elements in Canadian recovery.

Winter

"The payrolls of that industry", said Mr. Wilson, "provided generous wages at a time when many of those employed in other industries were out of work. Without the expenditures of the mining industry for supplies, machinery and other items, the depression in Canada would have been much more severe. In spite of low prices and the low level of demand for building materials, the total volume of the mineral production in 1935 again amounted to more than $35,000,000. The volume of gold production attained a new high record of $115,000,000. I am of the opinion that the great period in Canadian mineral production is in the future."

Unemployment

"While employment has shown some improvement during the past year, unemployment is still a major problem. Relief expenditures constitute a threatening drain upon the resources of many local communities. While recognizing fully our social obligations, I fear that these expenditures have not always been made with due regard to the public interest. The promised survey by the Dominion Government is awaited with great interest."

Sanctity of Contracts

Referring to the repudiation last year by one of the Provinces of important long-term power contracts, Mr. Wilson said: "The alleged ground was that of illegality, but it is noteworthy that disregarding all other advances, no abnormally heavy expenditures for relief resulting therefrom, have necessitated any appeal to aid from the Dominion Government. It was inevitable that sooner or later the question of control by the Federal Government over the finances of these provinces should be brought up, particularly in view of suggestions put forward that the Federal Government, by lending its credit, should assist in a general refunding of provincial debts so as to reduce the interest charge and thereby assist in balancing the budgets of these provinces. Such assistance by the Federal Government could only be justified if there were adequate safeguards against excessive borrowing by provinces in the future, a matter that would seem to involve an amendment to our constitution. With due safeguards, however, I believe that some such plan would merit and receive the support of public opinion in Canada.

Foreign Trade

"Seven-eighths of our total foreign trade in the past three years has been with the British Empire and the United States. The present upturn in business activity is associated with a substantial demand for Canadian goods in Empire markets and in the markets of the United States. In the twelve months ending in November 1935 Canadian exports to the Empire exceeded those of the same months of the previous two years by $25 million and $108 million respectively. Exports to the United States showed corresponding gains of $34 million and $100 million. Figures show that as yet Canada is not benefiting by any gains in general world buying power, but rather from the fact that every which is under way in Great Britain and the United States. It would seem that Canada is indeed fortunate to have secured favorable provisions with the two best customers. While the agreement with the United States has been in effect but a few days, in view of the gain of $100 million over the past two years, optimism as to further gains in exports to the United States during 1936 is justified.

Summary

"It would not feel justified in closing my remarks without emphasizing that many serious problems still confront us.

"But neither can I close on a pessimistic note. The Canadian people have faced — and I sincerely believe have overcome — the depression. At this stage we must not listen to the faint-hearted who would counsel timidity and discouraged by the trials of recent years. Those who now urge default, repudiation or inflation, and even the action of our financial problem are false prophets who have not correctly read the signs of the times. The Canadian people are made of stouter stuff.

"The upward trend in business would now seem to be definitely established. In fact, I believe we may look forward to the coming year with a greater optimism than has been possible at any time in the past six years."

General Manager's Address

Mr. S. G. Dobson, general manager, referred to the financial statement, as follows:

"The Sixty-Sixth Annual Report and Balance Sheet reflect continuance of the upturn of business which began in 1933, and which has progressed almost without interruption since that time. Totals under practically all headings are again higher, indicating the steady growth and expansion of the bank.

Deposits

"A year ago we reported an increase of $50,000,000 in deposits. This year we are able to report a further increase of over $50,000,000, or a total of over $100,000,000 in two years — an impressive amount. Deposits in Canada again increased in all provinces, savings deposits being up over $11,000,000.

"Because of the continued lack of demand for commercial loans, the main outlet for investment of the additional funds has been in the purchase of Government and Municipal securities. As a consequence, assets under these headings have increased by $63,000,000 to $196,000,000.

Assets Up $43,000,000

"Total assets during the year increased $42,000,000, and now stand at $400,319,700, the highest point recorded since 1931. Quick assets total at $125,679,181, or 58.72% of total liabilities to the public.

"Call Loans in Canada increased $2,898,054, while Call Loans outside of Canada decreased $10,690,196.

Profits

"Current Loans in Canada have increased by $200,000 and similar advances abroad by $2,871,809. While there has been a considerable improvement in business conditions, so far recovery has not increased appreciably the demand for bank accommodation.

"Our senior Executive organization was recently enlarged by the appointment of three Assistant General Managers, namely, Burnham L. Mitchell, James Muir and Harold E. Mosher. Mr. Mitchell will continue to supervise Ontario business with headquarters in Toronto as heretofore. Mr. Muir will, as heretofore, be attached to Head Office. All three are highly trained bankers of wide experience, who have spent their business lifetime in the service of the bank.

"At the last annual meeting, I ventured the opinion that we had every justification for looking forward to improved conditions during 1935. This expectation has been realized perhaps to an even greater extent than we had hoped for at that time. The outlook is still favorable and, as I see it, there is no reason why we should not enter 1936 with a feeling of optimism."

ate the borrowings of the Dominion and provinces and the provincial loan councils would pass on all provincial loans from their own provinces.

"I hope the provinces will study fully the benefits and implications of the scheme not only from the point of view of the immediate present but from the point of view of the best good of the credit of their province and the Dominion in the years to come", Mr. Dunning said.

Mr. Dunning declined to comment on the Social Credit proposals in Alberta. The Dominion only came into the picture should Alberta borrow money from the Dominion or require Dominion guarantees, he said.

"Our policy is to be as generous as possible in cash grants for relief and in making loans to those provinces who cannot raise money for their own relief," he added.

WILL NOT WOBBLE

Informed opinion in Ottawa is that the Social Credit plan will not work; that in any case as indicated by Premier Aberhart it will all need no cash, being a credit scheme and that if the people of Alberta accept it, then it is their own lookout. But so far as money required by the Alberta government is concerned the Federal government would hold the reins the minute the national interprovincial credit is involved.

Alberta must go to the loan council when it needs actual cash beyond what she raised from revenue. The loan council will only approve loans when it is satisfied that it is considered unlikely that Alberta would be able to raise money without the loan council's aid, or when such backing is being taken by investors as a guarantee.

Mr. Dunning declined to say clear that his objective was to maintain the credit of the Dominion and the provinces on a higher plane than ever. In the past provinces and the Dominion had gone to the money market without consulting each other, with unfavorable results. By consultation, the credit of each could be levelled out and it would be better all round.

COULDN'T GO ON

The Dominion could not go on handing out money to the provinces without some control over the use of the general credit. The policy that had been followed of loaning money to the provinces with the hope that they might some day be able to repay had to end.

The credit of the people of Canada was involved and that was the only sound credit Canada could not get to the stage of letting the borrower decide if he could repay.

Mr. Dunning spoke tentatively about Hon. Charles Cockcroft, the Alberta provincial treasurer who has been appointed Deputy Minister of Finance only within the past few days. It was learned here that Mr. Cockcroft approached the Dominion government for only seven eleven million dollars with respect to former borrowings of the province from the Dominion in the form of savings certificates.

The Dominion has refunded the money as it would be unfair to pay debts the province owed to its own people while the province put off the money it had borrowed outside Alberta.

SASKATCHEWAN CITED

It is recalled that during Mr. Dunning's regime in Saskatchewan he laid down the principle of keeping the provincial debt down to $50,000,000. Then there had been a change to the Anderson government which at once promised to spend $30,000,000 on roads. Now the debt of Saskatchewan was $170,000,000.

Mr. Dunning, drawing on his past experience, intimated that there had to be a sound basis for all future financing, hence his loan council. Graham Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada, would be the technical adviser to these councils but would have no deciding voice as to whether the Dominion loaned or guaranteed any monies.

CAN PAY DEBTS

"Canada can pay her debts," asserted the Minister of Finance. "The reason we are proposing national co-ordination is because the practice we have been following has seriously impaired our credit, and may impair our major structure, the federal credit of the Dominion. In the past the sole criterion has been the ability to borrow."

Mr. Dunning pointed out that in Canada financial institutions are being more and more considered as non-partisan matters. He did not believe any party in power at the Minister of Finance would let political considerations stand in the way of helping any province irrespective of what government that province had.

He emphasized that his whole approach to the problem was a national one, and for the maintenance and strengthening of national credit. The Alberta case was a special one due to the recent date of the conference.

Alberta has two further maturities to meet this year, one of $3,000,000 falling due April 1, and another of $1,250,000, Due Nov. 1. Some months ago Mr. Aberhart announced his intention of securing Dominion guarantee for a heavy loan for the purpose of rehabilitating the province financially.

Warm appreciation and satisfaction with the action of the Dominion government in assuming the $2,000,000 maturing issue of Alberta debentures was expressed by Premier William Aberhart. As a result of the Dominion action he will be able to cash in on these debentures.

"I am mighty glad to see this $2,000,000 loan," he said, "and I notice most satisfying that Hon. C. A. Dunning and his cabinet confreres have given away this year to refunded indebtedness incurred in the past.

"Once we can get our past indebtedness in good shape, we can take definite action on the new Social Credit plan we intend to introduce.

Asked if he had heard from Hon. Charles Cockroft, provincial treasurer regarding terms of the loan, the premier said he had received a letter stating a loan had been obtained, but no details regarding terms were incorporated.

However, in view of the premier's wire on the provincial stand regarding refusal to surrender autonomy, he felt that some arrangement between this progressive local council supervision must have been reached.

Asked if any definite arrangements had been made for meeting the issue falling due on April 1, the premier replied in the negative, but stated he hoped the government refunding plans would be complete by that time and the maturity issue would be taken care of.

CITIZEN TURNS WITNESS FEES OVER TO FUND

REGINA, Jan. 15.—William A. W.son, display manager for a Regina department store, who gave evidence before the Dominion Day riot inquiry committee this week, turned his witness fees over to the fund for little Peggy Millar. Her father, Detective Charles Millar was killed on March 8 during the night of the riot. Public subscriptions total approximately $8,000 to date for the eight-year-old orphan.

CITY OFFICER PLEASED OVER RELIEF ACTION

Satisfaction over the report that the provinces of Saskatchewan and British Columbia planned to take over 80 per cent of the direct relief burden now carried by municipalities was expressed Wednesday by Commissioner David Mitchell, who believed that Alberta should follow the lead.

Edmonton's council has already requested the province to assume 100 per cent of this city's direct relief costs, and the Calgary council, through Mayor A. Davison, is urging the government to relieve that city of its relief load to the extent of 75 per cent.

"I am heartily in accord with Mayor Davison's request and believe this is the least the province can do. Edmonton is asking the government to relieve us to the extent of 100 per cent, and I am of the opinion we have a right to expect help to the amount of at least 80 per cent," Mr. Mitchell declared.

CITY TO PRESS CONTINUANCE OF PROVINCIAL AID

Edmonton is expected to press for continuance of a contribution from the provincial government in lieu of service tax collections, the right to which was taken from the city in 1932 when the province instituted the provincial income tax, it was learned Wednesday.

At that time an arrangement was made whereby Edmonton was to receive a per capita grant annually, contribution from the government as a substitute for the service tax. Last year the city received $50,000 the 1934 contribution being $45,000.

The largest amount collected by the city in any year during the levying of the service tax here was $65,000.

COMPENSATION ACT INQUIRY MAY BE HELD

Labor Thinks New Government Should be Allowed More Time

CALGARY, Jan. 15.—Delegates to the Alberta Federation of Labor Convention decided here Tuesday governmental inquiry into the Workmen's Compensation Act and its administration should not be undertaken at present.

Opponents of the proposal for a governmental inquiry into the act argued the new government had not had sufficient time to become acquainted with the act in its present form and that at least another year should be allowed before general revision of the act was contemplated.

LABOR MEMBER URGED

Appointment of a labor member to the Alberta Compensation Board was urged, amendments to the Workmen's Compensation Act were requested and resolutions for hunting and truck traffic were suggested in other resolutions approved by delegates.

Changes suggested to the compensation board were:

BOARD OF REVIEW

A board of review for all cases; abolition of the three-day waiting clause; fist compensation of $3 a day and $21 a week; and for widows' pensions to $50 a month; payment of workmen on industrial disability instead of physician's condition; adequate provision for permanently partially disabled men; and inclusion of industrial respiratory troubles under industrial diseases.

Regulation of hours of labor on trucks and buses was urged. Other resolutions asked for a maximum of eight hours and 44 hours a week for truck and bus drivers; limitation of three hours to any respond to highway conditions; first aid kits on all buses; and limitation of truck widths to seven feet.

"On one occasion I asked them to wait because Ann was in her corsair peare. The mother upbraided me for this. The aunt, Harriet Easton, told me Ann was a most consummate liar, to believe nothing she said, and to watch my small change.

Roosevelt Hopes For New Farming Legislation Soon

WASHINGTON, Jan. 15.—Asserting a hope for enactment of new farm legislation very soon, President Roosevelt gave added substance Tuesday to reports the administration would seek controversial control of production.

Told Senator Norris (R-Neb) had asserted a belief the supreme court's AAA decision barred such regulation, Mr. Roosevelt said at his press conference he hoped the senator was unduly pessimistic.

The president said a bill is taking shape, but declined comment on its contents. He reported he was undecided whether to send congress a special message on the subject.

ELECTION OF CASGRAIN TO BE OPPOSED

English-Speaking Liberals Protest French-Canadian As Speaker

By THOMAS WAYLING
Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—Rumblings of intransigeant Liberalism are stirring over the speakership of the house of commons.

The English-speaking Liberals are protesting the coming election of Pierre F. Casgrain,* K.C., as speaker of the commons.

Following the last Liberal regime, from 1921 to 1930, French-Canadian member (Hon. Rodolphe Lemieux) held the speakership during which period there were three separate parliaments. From 1930 to 1935 there was an English-speaking Speaker (Hon. George Black, whose term was finished after his illness by Hon. B. Bowman).

TRADITION IS TO ALTERNATE

The tradition is to alternate English and French speakers, and when an English speaker presided in the commons a French speaker takes the senate and vice versa.

The government plans to nominate Mr. Casgrain on the ground that the last speaker was English. The English speaking members claim that Mr. Casgrain is violating by the tri-election of Mr. Lemieux, and that to continue the alternation the next speaker should be English speaking member from sitting in the Speaker's chair.

William Irvine, who has been a member since 1917 and is a former deputy speaker is pressing his claims, as Fred Sanderson, former Ontario whip.

DELECTABLE PLUM

The Speakership is a delectable plum with $4,000 allowance, sessional indemnity of $4,000, it carries a Speaker's allowance of $6,000 and House allowance of $4,000 making $12,000 in all or $1,000 less than a cabinet minister. The Speaker of the Senate gets the same.

The Deputy Speaker in each house in addition to his $4,000 indemnity gets a $4,000 allowance and $1,500 in lieu of a residence.

English-speaking Liberals are asserting that Quebec is getting too much; that Ontario now has elected the Speaker, Deputy Speaker in Quebec and should be considered.

Mr. Casgrain was first elected to the Commons in 1917 and has been re-elected at each general election since. Madame Casgrain is one of the leaders of the feminist movement in Quebec, and in the fore front of the fight for the provincial franchise for women.

GAS STOVE PUTS IT OVER RADIO

Why buy a cow when milk is free; or for that matter why pay rent for a radio when you've got a musical gas stove.

Such a versatile gas heater, talented to the point where it resembles music, is the unique possession of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Derval of 10749 97 street.

On numerous occasions in the evening, entertainment in the Derval circle at the Dervals has been enlivened by the gas stove doing its stuff. There is a radio in the residence, Mr. Derval admits, but 30 feet and two partitions separate it from the gifted musical stove.

Amazed and delighted with his prized possession, Mr. Derval has examined it carefully and has yet to dope out a scientific reason for its musical performances.

PROTEST USE OF MARKET AS HOME OF POULTRY SHOW

Complaint about the use of the city market building for poultry show exhibits on the ground that fowls create an unsanitary condition in a place where foodstuffs are sold, was received by the city health department, Wednesday.

Commenting on the complaint, Dr. R. B. Jenkins, medical health officer, said the health board had protested two years ago that the use of this building for the annual poultry show. The Edmonton Exhibition Association, which holds the annual show, had taken no action on the Board's protest, Dr. Jenkins stated.

It is stated there is the possibility of poultry fire being left in the building after exhibits are removed, and in this connection the health official declared that the portion of building used for the show should be thoroughly cleaned and white-washed as a precautionary measure.

Dr. Jenkins remarked that as the health board's protest was already before the association, no further action was being taken by the board at the present time.

HAUPTMANN IS REFUSED WRIT HABEAS CORPUS

defence counsel that Hauptmann's trial at Flemington was surrounded by prejudicial influences. U. S. Circuit Court Judge Warren Davis said that to grant the writ he would have to overrule both the New Jersey court of errors and appeals and the United States supreme court.

LAWYERS DESPAIR

Despair was written on the faces of the defence lawyers as they left the court room.

"That is the end," said one of the five attorneys, who would not be quoted by name.

The only possibility in the world is the United States Supreme Court," said Neil Burkinshaw, a Washington lawyer just added to the defence staff in a final effort to save Hauptmann.

Before going to the hearing and branding the writ application signed by Hauptmann himself in his death cell "a subterfuge and fraud," Attorney General David Wilentz said he had "reliable information" Governor Hoffman would grant a reprieve.

NEED ADDITIONAL FUNDS

The prosecutor of Hauptmann made the statement to members of the senate finance committee and added if such action was taken he would need additional funds to fight the case.

Governor Hoffman himself gave no hint as to whether he would proclaim the condemned man's life. He could only grant a reprieve of not exceeding 60 days, the state constitutions also having denied a plea for commutation of sentence.

wages of the father on which to exist. The entire wealth of the family was contained in the diminutive two-roomed cottage at the Red Deer where Mr. Offrey endeavored to raise kitchen produce in the summer to eke out an existence when the mines are closed down.

The Offrey home is situated in an isolated part of the Rosedale district, about four miles east of Rosedale hamlet.

WENT TO MILK COW

According to the story related by the distraught woman as she was being taken to the Drumheller hospital, she had left the three children in the bedroom when she went to milk the cow. Mr. Offrey was at work in the Cambrian mine two miles away. On her return to the house she saw smoke.

Dashing into the two-roomed home, she found the bedroom enveloped in flames. Groping toward the bed she located her three children and brought them all out of the blazing building.

Mrs Genice Ragon, whose home is about two hundred feet away, attracted by the cries of Mrs. Offrey, came to her assistance. The mother and children were carried to the Ragon home while another member of the family hurried to the nearest telephone.

RUSHED TO HOSPITAL

W. P. Goulding, C.P.R. agent at Rosedale, drove his car down the road to rush the victims to Drumheller hospital.

While no verification has been made it is believed the fire started by one of the children playing with matches.

DISCUSS AMENDMENTS TO B.N.A. ACT JANUARY 28

ALL PROVINCES ARE INVITED TO SEND DELEGATES

Committee Reaches Agreement on Necessity of Obtaining Certain Changes to the Constitution.

OTTAWA, Jan. 15—Jan. 28 has been fixed as the opening date for the Dominion-Provincial committee on amendments to the British North America Act. Invitations have been telegraphed by Hon. Ernest Lapointe, minister of justice, to all provincial attorneys-general, asking them to come to Ottawa on that date.

Mr. Lapointe and some representatives of provincial legal departments sat on the committee on financial questions which finished its work Tuesday and reached agreement on the necessity of obtaining certain amendments to the constitution.

RESOLUTION ADOPTED

At the Dominion-provincial conference in December the sub-conference on constitutional questions adopted a resolution that Canada, as in the case of all other self-governing dominions, should have the power to amend the Canadian constitution.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of nine to one with the New Brunswick delegate dissenting because he could not approve in its entirety the resolution, which follows:

"1—That amendments to the British North America Act are now and subsequently may be necessary and imperative.

"2—That, as in the case of all the other self-governing Dominions, Canada should have the power to amend the Canadian constitution providing a method of procedure therefore satisfactory to the Dominion parliament and provincial legislatures be devised.

"3—That the minister of justice confer at an early date on a meeting of appropriate officials of the Dominion and provinces to prepare a report of such method of procedure to be submitted to a subsequent conference.

"4—That a conference be held at an early date after such draft has been prepared to consider each method of procedure."

ALBERTAN IS PURCHASED BY SOCRED PARTY

Calgary Paper Will be Merged With Social Credit Chronicle

CALGARY, Jan. 15—The Albertan announces the following on the front page today:

"Negotiations have been completed for the purchase of the Calgary Albertan, the only morning paper in the province of Alberta, with which will be merged the Social Credit Chronicle.

"The paper will continue to be published as a morning newspaper and will enjoy the confidence of the government as well as being the official organ of the Alberta Social Credit party. The present management will continue.

RADIO PURCHASED

"Arrangements also include the purchase of Radio Station CJCJ, the broadcasting station of the Albertan Publishing Company Limited.

"For the first time in the history of Canadian journalism the ownership of a daily newspaper will be offered to the public through the sale of preferred and common stock. Details of this offering will be announced later.

"(Signed) George M. Bell, publisher.

"When shown this announcement, Mr. Aberhart made the following statement:

NEWS OF THE DAY

"I am very glad indeed to hear this and I trust that all Social Crediters will avail themselves of the opportunity to establish an organ that will give them the news of the day from the citizens' viewpoint.

"This action will help Social Crediters implement the requirements of Major Douglas in his interim report regarding the radio service and the press.

"(Signed) William Aberhart."

Purchase of the Calgary Albertan had been made by members of the Social Credit party who felt that the first recommendation of the report written last summer by Major C. H. Douglas, chief economic adviser to the provincial government, to the effect that both press and radio facilities should be made available to the government in disseminating Social Credit propaganda, declared Premier William Aberhart on Wednesday in commenting on the announcement that the Albertan had been bought by Social Crediters.

ATTENTIVITY REPORT

He drew attention to the recommendation in the report and said that many members of the party felt that this item could be implemented.

"Will you take an active part in the operation of the paper and if you hold stock in it?" the Premier was asked.

"No, I am too busy to take an active part in the paper, and so long as I am in politics will not become active in it," he replied.

"Will the Albertan be given the news broadcast?" he was asked.

WANT TO GIVE NEWS

"Not necessarily," he replied. "We want the news to get across to the people. So long as the newspapers give service they will get the news. I presume the Albertan will try to give us a little extra service, but this will not debar other papers. If the Albertan does not give us service, it cannot expect the treatment different from others."

The premier said that negotiations had been under way for some time, but he was not familiar with all details, nor as to methods of selling stock.

TAX PREPAYS ARE NEARING FIGURES SET

Now Total Nearly Three-Quarters of a Million Dollars

Well on the way to the three-quarter-million mark, prepayments of 1936 taxes made up till Tuesday night totalled $673,687, Tax Collector Thomas Walker announced Wednesday, last day of the prepayment period ending January 15. Objective on early tax payments this year is $1,000,000, and it is expected that the total will be within shooting distance of this figure if the full estimate is not realized.

MAIL PAYMENTS

There is every possibility that substantial payments will be recorded for Wednesday when collections for the day have been compiled. Tax officials believe there is a considerable amount of prepayments from outside being forwarded to the city through the mails, and providing letters are postmarked before 15 or earlier these taxpayers will also receive advantage of the 4½ per cent. interest allowed by the city on amounts paid during the prepayment period.

Mr. Walker stated it was not necessary for property-holders to pay the whole of their taxes by 1936 in order to receive the interest. The rate is also applied on part payments.

$262,000 PAID

A total of $262,000 was paid into the tax collection department Tuesday, larger payments being as follows: Hudson's Bay Co., $70,000; Swift Canadian, $20,000; Canadian Bank of Commerce, $15,000; Bank of Nova Scotia, $9,670; Imperial Bank, $8,200; Bank of Toronto, $5,500; Dominion Bank, $4,894; Safeway Stores, $7,181; Revillon Wholesale, $5,000; Gainer's Ltd., $6,000; International Harvester, $7,000.

Several of the larger industrial firms, all the local banks and a large number of the smaller taxpayers have made early payments of taxes this year in order to secure benefit on the interest allowed on their monies.

Conditions Better

TORONTO, Jan. 15. — Whatever may be the supreme court's decision upon the constitutional validity of the Natural Products Marketing Act, the fact remains marketing conditions have been more stable than if nothing had been attempted, George Barrat, Kelowna, B.C., told the annual convention of the Canadian Fruit and Vegetable Jobbers' Association Tuesday.

The world's leading city in wickedness and vice is reputed to be Cairo, Egypt.

Many Snatchers Are Still At Large

As Col. Lindbergh and his family go into exile in England to escape kidnapping threats, J. Edgar Hoover, head G-man, points with pride to federal sleuths' record of 122 kidnapers behind bars with 25 others waiting trial. In spite of this record, William Mahan, identified as co-kidnapper of nine-year-old George Weyerhaeuser; Alvin Karpis, Thomas Robinson, Jr., kidnapper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll of Louisville, and the kidnappers of June Robles of Tucson, Ariz., are still at large.

COURT TESTS LEGALITY OF EIGHT LAWS

Most Important Constitutional Appeal in Court's History

OTTAWA, Jan. 15.—In a rambling, stone-faced building, designed originally as a stable, six judges of the Supreme Court of Canada will start today the most important constitutional appeal in the court's history.

Every man, woman and child in Canada will be effected, directly or indirectly, by the court's decision on the legality of eight laws passed by parliament in 1934 and 1935. The appeal has even a broader aspect in its possibility of leading to amendments to the British North America Act, under which the constitution, to re-align legislative powers of the Dominion and provinces.

EIGHT STATUTES

Here are the eight statutes which will be examined in the supreme court's legal laboratory: Employment and Social Insurance Act, Natural Products Marketing Act, Minimum Wage Act, Limitation of Hours of Work Act, The Day of Rest Act, The Dominion Trade and Industry Act, Farmers' Creditors Arrangement Act and certain sections of the criminal code based on recommendations of the mass buying commission.

PARALLEL U.S. CASES

In several aspects the appeal will parallel the test cases before the American supreme court in which President Roosevelt's NRA and AAA were declared illegal.

The argument before the court will last several days, depending largely on the number of provinces wishing to attack the legislation.

WOP MAY SECRETARY? WALLI HAS NEAT COCKTAIL DEVICE

Newspapermen chasing around the Macdonald hotel Wednesday morning hot on the trail of interviews with mining men, fell like fugitives from a leper colony—the scribes were distinctly unwelcome.

Major Richard M. Treloar, executive and engineering chief of the B.E.A.R.' was up in room 235, so a call was put through on the hotel telephone.

"Majah Treloar's secretary speaking," said a voice sounding ominously like that of Wilfred "Wop" May who was known to be up in the B.E.A.R. hotel headquarters.

"The Majah is not well this morning and will not be able to see anybody," observed the May-ish voice assuming what was fondly believed to be an English accent.

"Is the Major going north or back to Toronto again?" was the question asked of the "secretary-birdman."

"I cawn't say," murmured the voice. "The Majah just came in from Toronto today."

WORSE PICKINGS

Even worse pickings were at hand in attempts to contact W. M. Archibald, millionaire executive of British Columbia mining properties.

That Mr. Archibald was in conference was evident by the sound of many voices coming over the line, when the newsman put in a call.

"I'm busy," announced Mr. Archibald tersely, embellishing his short but simple statement with a snappy "click" as he hung up.

Emil J. Walli, chief of Eldorado, was the one bright spot in the dark. Mr. Walli came out of Mackenzie Air Services offices and while enthusiastically demonstrating his new cocktail mixing slide rule, admitted that it was.

GOES EAST AGAIN

"Gilbert Labine has gone East again," said Mr. Walli, "and I will fly back to Eldorado Saturday."

"What will you have?" grinned the mining man as he manipulated his cocktail slide rule.

"A Manhattan," suggested the reporter.

Mr. Walli put his slide rule, which works along the same lines as an automatic bridge score, into operation and observed that if the Manhattan was to be produced, two parts of rye, one of Italian Vermouth and some cracked ice would have to be found, after which the mixture needed straining and shaking, according to the readings on the slide rule.

Mr. Walli will gift an Edmonton friend with the ingenious cocktail "readr reckoner" before he entplanes for Eldorado.

TARIFF BOARD AUTO HEARING NEARING END

Various Interests Compare Notes on Tariff Suggestions

OTTAWA, Jan. 15. — The Tariff Board's automobile hearing neared an end Tuesday as various interests represented at it compared notes on their tariff suggestions.

The Ford Motor Company's proposals that duties on automobile parts be reduced and duties on cars be maintained at the tariff effective before the Canada-United States trade treaty was challenged by parts manufacturers who asked that parts duties be held at or close to their present levels.

The two groups will continue their discussion today, and it is expected the hearing will end today or early Thursday.

Establishment of a uniform price for automobiles throughout Canada by equalizing freight charges was proposed by R. T. Graham, counsel for the three prairie provinces, and C. H. O'Halloran, counsel for British Columbia.

The equalizing freight charges the selling prices of cars in western Canada and the Maritime provinces would be reduced and those in Ontario and Quebec increased, said Mr. Graham. It was possible allowance would have to be made for variations in demand owing to good and bad crop years in western Canada.

Five women residents of a boarding house at 10024 101 street, were driven out into the cold at 9.15 a.m. Wednesday, when flames broke out in the basement of the premises. Stopped before it reached the first floor, the fire did little damage.

MINERS WILL PROTEST ONE MAN PROBE

Want Three - Man Commission With Working Miner on Enquiry

Mine Workers' Union of Canada criticizing the manner in which the provincial government plans to probe the recent Coalhurst disaster, has ordered its members to institute a "protest campaign" against the "one-man judicial enquiry" which will be held by Mr. Justice Lunney at Lethbridge, Feb. 3.

"We instructed Premier Aberhart and members of the cabinet at the legislative buildings Monday," said burly Pete Barclay, vice-president of the union, in making announcement of the protest. "We made three major requests but we didn't get much response.

WANT REPRESENTATION

"We asked them to hold a public commission of enquiry into the Coalhurst disaster. We want a three-man commission with a working miner as one of the members. We want the right to subpoena witnesses and we want the government to pay our legal expenses so that we can have our cases presented properly."

"Can't your case be presented just as easily before Mr. Justice Lunney?" the Bulletin asked.

"We have no quarrel with Mr. Justice Lunney," Barclay replied. "The policy of the Social Credit government seems to be to confine their commissions to one-man affairs. Look at the Earlow Commission for instance. We can't expect that our case is ever going to be presented fully unless there is at least one man on the board of enquiry who knows the real conditions under which we live and work."

AFRAID OF BLACK-LIST

Barclay also told the Bulletin that the delegation had asked the provincial government to dismiss the Workmen's Compensation Board because of "their shabby treatment of injured workmen."

We demand the repeal of the Trades and Industry Act," he continued. "Our reasons are that it deprives the miners of their right to collective bargaining and their right to strike in defence of their working and living conditions."

Other delegates were: Joe Ferguson, Cadomin miners' union; Jim MacDonald, Nordegg local union; William Foster, Canmore miners' union; Enoch Williams, Blairmore miners' union; Jack Dodds, Carbondale miners' union; Adam Robinson and William Ramage, Coalhurst miners' union and J. Stokalyk, secretary, Mine Workers' Union of Canada.

COUNSEL SAYS UNDERWORLD PLOT BARED

Bootleg Ring Out to "Get" Detective Petheram is Charge

Detective Sergt. Herbert B. Petheram appeared before Magistrate A. H. Gibson, K.C., Wednesday morning, charged with giving perjured evidence before Mr. Justice T. M. Tweedie in Supreme Criminal court in the case of Walter Anderson, who was tried on a charge of assault. His statement, the basis of the charge, was that he had seen Anderson between 10 and 11 a.m., May 15, and that Anderson at that time had no marks on his face. The case is continuing Wednesday afternoon.

The present complaint was laid by Jeremiah L. Mulcahy, former city police constable, who was discharged after he had given defence evidence in the Anderson case without notifying the chief constable of his intention.

SAYS UNDERWORLD PLOT

Sensational charges that the prosecution was "just another attempt by one of the bootleggers to put Sergeant Petheram out of business" were hurled by Neil D. Maclean, K.C. when he cross-examined Mulcahy. The former officer denied the suggestion.

First witness was Elmer Pendleton, who stated that he had struck Anderson on the nose, giving him a slight cut on the side of the nose. The next day he saw him with a black eye. He was not certain of the dates, believing he had hit Anderson about May 14 or 15.

Fred Wagan testified he had seen Anderson with a black eye but was not even sure of the month. Anton Linge gave similar evidence.

Alvin Albert Duncan declared he remembered distinctly having seen Anderson with a black eye on the afternoon of May 14. He was certain of the time.

MULCAHY ON STAND

Mulcahy took the stand, stating he had seen Anderson on Jasper avenue, between 4 and 4:30 p.m., May 15 and noted the black eye.

He underwent a searching cross-examination by Mr. Maclean, stating that he had been a policeman for six and one-half years prior to his dismissal. He had worked for a taxi operator prior to his engagement in the force and admitted having worked for one since his dismissal. He had been suspended once for misconduct, he said.

"Do you know Walter Clix, a bootlegger who recently had an action against Petheram?" Mr. Maclean asked.

"Yes, I know him."

"Isn't your present boss the king bootlegger of this city?"

"You had better ask somebody who knows more about it than I do."

TO CLEAR OWN RECORD

"I'm asking you because I think you know as much about it as anybody," Mr. Maclean fired back, then continued: "Isn't this prosecution of Petheram just another attempt by the bootleggers to put him out of business?"

"It certainly is not," Mulcahy answered. "This is my own doing and it is to clear my own record."

"All right, Mr. Mulcahy, I hope we've settled it for you," Mr. Maclean answered.

Walter Anderson took the stand, testifying that Pendleton had struck him on May 14, giving him a black eye and at the same time causing him to scratch one on his cheek. He was on the stand at the adjournment.

CHECK SCARLET FEVER CASES AS COMPLAINTS MADE

Close check-up of scarlet fever cases here is being made by city health authorities following the discovery that children have been permitted by parents to attend school classes while suffering from the malady, Dr. R. B. Jenkins, medical health officer, reported Wednesday. Several instances of this nature have already occurred, and the medical officer stated that on Wednesday a young boy was removed from a class-room when it was learned he had scarlet fever.

A number of children going to school while in the highly contagious "peeling" stage of scarlet fever have been brought to the attention of the department, along with the fact that pupils in question have received no medical attention. Failure to call a physician is put down to ignorance of the symptoms of the disease or sheer carelessness on the part of parents involved.

Symptoms of the disease include a sore throat and rash. The boy taken from a city school to hospital Wednesday ran a high fever. The disease by a rash on his chest, Dr. Jenkins said.

Fifteen new cases of scarlet fever have been reported to the health department so far this week.

IF IT WILL HELP ALBERTA THE EDMONTON BULLETIN IS FOR IT

WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 15

HOW DID IT HAPPEN?

Mr. King, member of the legislature for Cochrane, says only 20 persons in his constituency are on relief, and he thinks "some of the 20 could be taken off."

A situation of that kind anywhere in the province excites curiosity. The Government should find out how this miracle has happened. The information might be useful in other parts.

A district in which only 20 people need public assistance occupies a distinguished position, is bound to be envied, and might well be imitated if the relief cases there are so few because of action that has been taken to provide employment.

RETAIN THE TAXPAYERS

Premier Aberhart is on solid ground in taking steps to prevent municipalities selling taxpayers' property for arrears of taxes except where this is "absolutely necessary."

That will be less necessary now that increased federal allowances are to be passed along to the municipalities on account of unemployment relief. The move to stop sales is therefore timely.

And even where such sales are held to be necessary they are usually bad business. Depriving a taxpayer of his property for a fraction of what it is worth is a pennywise and pound foolish policy, to say nothing about the principle involved. It is better to keep taxpayers on the roll than to cut them off, even when cutting them off means getting others on. For in the majority of cases the new names would likely be added to the list anyway in course of time.

TIRED OF PRETENCE

When Premier Baldwin asked the Conservatives in Ross and Cromarty "in the interest of the National Government" to vote for Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, his secretary for Dominions affairs, they replied they would not do it, and told him "Your action challenges the whole democratic structure of the Unionist party."

They might have gone further, and told him a coalition government in its composition "challenges the whole democratic structure" of any country, being based on compromise and holding office under a pretence of unity. Political honesty cannot live in a coalition atmosphere.

Canadian electors have no cause to regret that they refused to be beguiled by the soft nothings of those "best minds" who tried to get them to set up a coalition government at Ottawa with a National label on it.

The rebellion in Ross-Cromarty, following the explosion touched off by the Laval-Hoare affair, carries its own significance. The days of Britain's coalition are numbered, rather because than despite its recent overwhelming victory at the polls.

GERMANY LOOKS FOR TRADE

Germany has a trade commission scouting around for business in Manchukuo, and seemingly finding what it is looking for.

Since both the yen and the mark are under disapproval in the best circles of international finance, having little gold behind them, there is a prospect that the two countries will strike up a lively trade.

Of course, neither country having much gold, the trade will be "barter," whether called that or not. Each will have to reckon the money of the other in terms of things it wants, not gold.

But that, in this peculiar age, is an advantage rather than a hindrance to the making of trade bargains. Gold is not cutting much of a figure now in international commerce. Britain, for instance, is doing business with pounds which cannot be converted into gold. And, to the consternation of the orthodox, it is leading the world in trade and recovery.

Canada should invite Germany's commission to go home by way of the Dominion, stopping off here long enough to hunt up some chances for business. And should tell the commission we, too, have got over the gold superstition and are willing to trade on a basis of products for products.

MARKING TIME

Uncertainty as to future conditions smothers business, as a wet blanket may smother a fire.

The manufacturers who waited on the Provincial Government, to ask that they be given information as soon as possible regarding the legislative program now in preparation, were making a reasonable request, and one which very greatly concerns the general welfare, as well as that of the manufacturers.

What new taxes are to be imposed, if any, what regulative measures are to be put into effect, whether or what codes are to be established; are questions which directly relate to the conditions under which the manufacturers and businessmen generally will have to carry on their undertakings.

Business plans cannot be made until it is known what intentions the Ministers have in these directions, and until the probable result of the measures are evaluated. Nobody can be expected to stake money in any major business operation until he has this information and has calculated what will be the results of the changes in increasing his burdens or limiting his opportunities.

That the Government's program has not yet been announced can be understood. The Ministers have undoubtedly been busy. And that they have a complication of financial difficulties to deal with is clear enough.

But it is also plain that businessmen in the province are marking time because they do not know what the program may mean for them in the way of changed conditions.

It is to be supposed that as a result of the interview the Ministers will speed up their plans in any way possible and make them known with as little delay as may be. The public, not less than the manufacturers and the merchants, will hope so. While progress is being reported in most of the other provinces, we are not in Alberta "getting anywhere."

EVENING

I know the night is near at hand.

Brief be the twilight as I pass

Causes of Flatulence

By DOCTOR FRANK McCOY

Flatulence, or excessive stomach and intestinal gas, is one of the symptoms very commonly found among those sick enough to consult a doctor. It is also a frequent symptom among those considering themselves in average good health, who are nevertheless inconvenienced occasionally by gas pressure following the use of a meal consisting of unwise mixtures of food. Flatulence may accompany many of the disorders of the stomach and intestines and is a prominent symptom among patients with chronic indigestion, colitis, constipation, chronic appendicitis, etc. It may occur as a symptom in gall bladder disorders and proves annoying to the nervous patient suffering from "nervous indigestion." Mild disturbances of the digestive processes rseulting from the use of rich foods or from the use of foods wholesome in themselves but incorrectly combined, often result in the formation of an excessive amount of gas, which proves troublesome to the patient. The thin, slender patient with prolapsus is likely to be made uncomfortable by gas which accumulates. Sleep disturbances such as dreams and nightmares likewise may be induced by the same symptom.

Dr. F. McCoy

In those complaining principally of stomach gas, the most likely cause is air-swallowing. These patients have formed the habit of swallowing air unconsciously and their efforts to belch it up only causes additional air to enter the stomach. The hydrochloric acid of the stomach discourages the formation of gas in this organ to some extent, and when it is actually present it will usually be due either to air-swallowing or to the use of certain foods which do not agree with the patient. When the patient uses a food which previous experience has taught him will cause gastric discomfort, including gas pressure, there undoubtedly exists a strong expectancy that the former distress will repeat itself and this unconscious expectation of trouble helps the anticipated symptoms to appear. Self-suggestion of this type will have considerable power to bring about the discomfort feared.

In normal health, there is present at all times in the stomach and intestines, a small amount of gas; however, inasmuch as we are unaware of it, its presence is ignored. It is only when gas accumulates in an abnormal amount, that the patient is cognizant of its formation.

The common causes of flatulence are: Overeating; the use of wrong food combinations; the use of foods which ferment easily because of their chemical compositions such as onions, garlic, cooked cabbage and beans; the excessive use of starch and sugar; eating too rapidly without chewing the food long enough; and eating when tired or enervated.

Dietetic indiscretions are the principal cause of flatulence. Even after the patient corrects those habits of eating which are "not good" and substitutes for them those habits which are good, an immediate change for the better may not be apparent, although after following these good habtis for several weeks, a gradual improvement will occur. It is not reasonable to suppose that one may eat unwisely for years and then by a simple change in diet, expect a cure overnight. At least a few weeks must elapse before the digestive juices will become better adjusted to each other, and before the excess bacteria in the intestine will diminish. These excess bacteria had, for a long time, the purpose of breaking up the food materials being used in too large an amount or being used in the wrong combinations. After living on a better diet for several weeks, the bacteria will decrease because they are no longer needed. It is often to cut down on the amount of starch consumed, as starchy foods usually cause the most fermentation.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

QUESTION—C. E. writes: "Am enervated all the time. Had the blood pressure tested and the doctor mentioned either hypertension or hypotension; do not remember which. Is there any way you can tell me which condition is most likely to accompany enervation?"

ANSWER — Enervation or weakness is most likely to be associated with hypotension, or low blood pressure. As a general rule, the blood pressure, exhibits a great deal of energy patient with arterial hypertension, or high and it is not propable that he would be markedly enervated. You will find that the weakness and the low blood pressure will be overcome by suitable exercise to increase both strength and endurance. Walking will do a great deal to provide greater muscular strength and to raise the blood pressure. In addition to exercising, watch your diet carefully, and use only that amount of food which your body can make use of, and no more. I will be glad to send you articles on Low Blood Pressure and Strength from Walking, which will provide you with further information. These articles will be forwarded to any one desiring them who writes to me in care of this newspaper and encloses one large, self-addressed envelope and ten cents. I suggest that you be persistent in observing those rules of right living which build good health. Do not rest content until the blood pressure is once more 120 and until your present weakness has been replaced by a feeling of normal strength. In your case, it would be a good plan to secure an additional article on Auto-Intoxication, which is also available. Judging from your letter, I am not sure if you are still under your doctor's supervision, but if such is the case, he has probably cautioned you against allowing self-poisoning to continue.

The Passing Show

By J. S. COWPER

Journalists visiting the former stamping grounds of the late Huey Long say that the master demagogue of the century will live in the memory of his people as a martyred saint.

Aged workmen there were, who when Huey lay stricken with a bullet, prayed that they might be taken if he could be spared. They remembered his free schoolbooks, his school bus services, his new schoolhouse, his roads, his tax reductions, his debt moratorium and his abolition of the poll tax. They thought that if he lived he would fulfil his promises to give every man a home, a car, a radio and $5000 a year. But except among the aged and the credulous, the example of Huey Long is chiefly used to back up the theory that an able man who knows his job and does things, is better for the public—even if he does fill his own pockets—than the honest nincompoop who blunders and dallies and has only his probity to commend him.

J. S. Cowper

Not that Huey couldn't quote the Bible and talk the mediaeval theology that passes for religion in some parts of the ignorant south. He believed in being all things to all men. He built a political machine that is said to still collect $5,200,000 a year from the gambling joints and resorts in the red light district of New Orleans, and a further $2,500,000 from slot machine and punch board privileges. The heirs, Bob Maestri, Commissioner of Conservation and large owner of property in the bagnio district of New Orleans, and his rival, Seymour Weiss, are running the political machine that Huey perfected.

Heywood Broun, thousand dollar a week columnist of the New York World-Telegram, has been spending some time in the haunts of the former Kingfish of Louisiana politics. He reports Huey still the second favorite topic of discussion in the bars and restaurants of New Orleans.

One old French restaurant man who boasts that anyone can buy dinner for two years at his place and never eat the same dish twice, had bitter regret for Huey, but it was more a professional than a political regret. It was because Huey always said "Bring me fried oysters." As Broun tells the story, the maestro repined thusly:

"A chef he works for years to prepare himself, and then the great man comes and says, 'Fried oysters.' Sometimes it is a dozen Huey wants and sometimes two dozen. Just fried oysters and a bottle of Worcestershire sauce. Upon each oyster a drop of Worcestershire, and then each one he takes in his fingers and eats so.

"Huey Long is my friend. I have said to him:—'It is not good to eat fried oysters in your fingers. It is worse when you have put on them the Worcestershire sauce.' And I have told him, 'Use the fork as much as possible.' But each time I have told Huey he would laugh and order more fried oysters and eat them with his fingers."

Monsieur A. sipped his cognac slowly and said:—"I am French and you are American, and perhaps you would not understand. In France we have a thing called democracy. I do not know exactly how to translate it for you. It means go slowly. That is why I am against dictators and people who eat fried oysters in their fingers. They are in too much of a hurry. What would you? There are days to come and there will be more oysters."

"No," said a newspaper man, "Huey was right. His days were numbered and he had to hurry. He wanted to make the world his oyster."

"But yes," said Monsieur A., "it is so I have said it. He should not have tried to take it in his fingers. He should have used a fork."

The sayings and doings on his western American visit in 1882 of an English aesthete who didn't use his fingers in eating fried oysters, are amusingly told in a new book, "Oscar Wilde Discovers America." The long-haired poet with his knee breeches, velvet coat, sunflower, effeminate manners and talk about art for art's sake and of beauty for the good of the soul, was a god-send for the caricaturists and the pranksters.

Audiences admired his wit and men with shrewd judgment noted the square shoulders and two hundred pounds of brawn inside the velvet coat. The Bohemian Club members in San Francisco plotted a great joke. They were to dine and wine Oscar. The fun was to start after they got him helplessly drunk. Manfully they struggled, but when the gray dawn arrived, Wilde was still speaking in calm, unhurried tones, but the rest were dead to the world. This herculean feat in masculinity had to be avenged. The plotters arranged to intrigue the visitor into a dollar ante poker game.

Wilde wakened out of a stained-glass attitude to enquire, "What is dollar ante?" and the boys chuckled in their throats as Oscar took a seat. Slowly the cards were dealt. Wilde gazed away into space, with a look of unutterable melancholy. Everybody went in. A Captain Foster bet five dollars, and his friend Ned Fry raised him five. Oscar murmured dubiously but put up his portion.

"Ten harder," said the captain.

"Ten more than you," remarked Fry.

Wilde knit his brow and said, "The o'ershadowing sky is murky, but I must stay. I will—how do you phrase it—call? I will call on you?"

The captain laid down his cards with a smile of triumph. "Three aces," said he.

"Full hand," said Fry proudly, and reached for the pot.

"Too-too," the poet murmured, and laid down four deuces.

As he arose, he said drawlingly to the company, "Now I remember, gentlemen. We used to indulge in this little recreation at Oxford. Come and take a snifter with me."

All this happened before a British poet issued the international warning:

"But oh beware of my countryman,
When my countryman grows polite."

On This Date

A Day in Canadian History —o— By FRED WILLIAMS

On this date in 1896 the political crisis at Ottawa, precipitated on January 8 by the resignation of seven members of the Bowell ministry, was ended by a compromise. Sir Mackenzie Bowell had offered to resign; Lord Aberdeen declined to accept his resignation; Sir Charles Tupper, who had come from England to try and salvage the Conservative party from its shipwreck, had declined to "have anything to do with the re-organization of the government unless all parties would agree to bury the past." There was thus no alternative but for the "nest of traitors" (as Bowell called the mutineers) to return and await developments.

This was done, it being understood that it was purely a temporary arrangement and that just as soon as Sir Charles Tupper could be elected to parliament, he having become secretary of state, Sir Mackenzie would retire. Sir Charles was elected for Cape Breton and on February 11 took his seat in the Commons, deposing G. E. Foster as leader. On April 27 Sir Mackenzie resigned, Sir Charles was sworn as Prime Minister, and the campaign began which ended in the disastrous defeat of the Conservatives on June 23 and the advent of Wilfrid Laurier to power.

The bolters from Bowell were severely criticised by both friends and foes, but the judgment of history now seems to be that by coming out in the open they took a better course than if the quarrels had been suppressed and a condition created much like in which J. Israel Tarte in later years asserted that there were times when ministers in council "fought like blazes."

Sir Charles Tupper gave his all in that election campaign. Well over 70 years of age he waged a great fight, but the split in the party over the Manitoba remedial bill together with the resentment of Bowell's friends deprived his party of any chance of victory. It was all a sorry mess without parallel in our political history.

THE CHICKEN SHOW

Editor, Bulletin: A citizen went to the civic block to complain that somebody in the city limits was keeping cream, butter, eggs and vegetables for sale in a chicken house.

The citizen pointed out that the poultry that had been occupying the coop would leave company behind, lice dust, which effect foodstuffs and later people. This practice should be stopped. The health inspector was asked to do something about it. And so the citizen was asked to give the address of this place. "O.K." said the complainer. "Look through the window; across the road is the chicken coop in other words the "Rice Street Market". This place is for a few days a poultry house. Some of its occupants brought company with them and most likely will leave some of them behind. Next Saturday the market will supply food to our Governor, maybe our premier, our mayor, judges, lawyers, doctors and all Edmonton citizens and therefor all these people will be buying food, which is sold in a chicken house.

The Health Dept. is so fussy about cleanliness, health and protection against diseases in milk, butter, meat, etc. Why don't they get busy and stop Edmonton's largest food supplying building from being used as a chicken coop?

The City of Edmonton spent a sum of money to build a special place for chicken shows at the exhibition grounds; why not use this place instead of throwing out some stallholders from the market. These stall holders keep the market going for 51 weeks. For 51 weeks live poultry has no right to be in the market; of course I understand these birds are not aristocrats as they are to be sold to be killed and then to go into the frying pan, but the week of the poultry show the birds are aristocrats that is why they have the privilege of staying inside the market.

Last spring the same citizen shot, by mistake, two tame ducks and the farmer thinking his ducks were aristocrats and of royal blood asked $50.00 for the two ducks. The citizen hunter is going to the show and try to buy two aristocrat ducks worth $50.00 for the farmer to clear his conscience.

LIKE IT OR NOT

In Quebec, political meetings are always held on Sundays during a campaign. In France itself even the elections are held on Sunday. But, rightly or wrongly, there has been a well-defined feeling against political activities on the Sabbath Day in Alberta.

Still, it must be borne in mind that in Alberta, we have a government headed by a Premier who seems to claim peculiar intimacy with God himself. Hence, prophets of these or later days, it appears to us that Mr. Aberhart is within his rights. "Vox Aberherti, vox Dei," as it were. The thunders of the Alberta Jehovah are appropriate on Sunday and if you don't like it, you can just get over your "confounded impatience."—Vegreville Observer.

SOAKING THE FARMER

It is suggested that the proposed codes are to be regarded as the initial step in bringing Social Credit into effect, as the "just price" will thus be established. That, of course, is an utterly absurd contention. The Douglas "just price" is a price well below the actual cost of producing the goods and the state then re-imburses the ascertained loss to the producer. This is done on a system of careful cost calculation and solely to promote free consumption through prices so low that the consumer can readily afford to buy.

The Alberta Act has precisely the opposite objective, namely, to increase prices by eliminating free competition. It is, in fact, merely another raid on the farm by the organized retail trade seeking easier and greater profits. Every farmer should protest strongly to the local member against these new groups being largely empowered to fatten on an impoverished agriculture.—C. W. Peterson, in the Farm and Ranch Review, Calgary.

Look Social Credit Squarely Between the Eyes

By R. T. ELLIOTT, K.C.

In order to make Social Credit work it will be necessary to buy everything raised for sale by farmers, and pay therefor cost of production plus a profit; also to buy everything manufactured for sale in the province and pay therefor cost of production plus a profit; also to buy all minerals raised for sale in the province and pay therefor cost of mining and marketing plus a profit; also to tax all imports brought into the province, plus handling costs and a profit.

In order to get the money to do these things there will be just two sources of revenue; one will be the money realized from sale of exports; the other will be money raised by taxation. These two sources of revenue will also have to take care of the costs of government in all its branches; the costs of transportation, and emergency costs due to unforseen and accidental occurrences; and all wages and salaries.

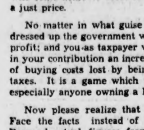
Now whether the system of bookkeeping used in the Social Credit System be a Douglas Plan or an Aberhart Plan or any other plan,—the final act in the play will be a demand upon you to pay, by way of tax, your share of the cost of carrying out the plan.

This demand will be made upon you whether you be farmer, manufacturer, business man, or wage earner or salary earner; and the higher the prices paid under the Social Credit Plan, the bigger the taxes which will be demanded from you.

Every Social Credit cheque issued will be a chicken which will come home to roost in a tax bill; even though disguised as a just price.

No matter in what guise or shape the Social Credit system is dressed up the government will be the only real buyer at cost plus profit; and you as taxpayer will be the only real payer—including in your contribution an increased percentage to cover the amounts of buying costs lost by being entrusted to persons who pay no taxes. It is a game which will beat every responsible citizen—especially anyone owning a home or farm or real estate.

Now please realize that you have grown too old to dream. Face the facts instead of embracing highly colored theories. Demand actual figures from the government—instead of emotional orations.



The Tragedy Of Sir Henry Thornton

By D'Arcy Marsh

CHAPTER IX.

Discussing the building of the Canadian National Railways with Courtney Ryley Cooper, the American journalist, Sir Henry once said: "Please understand that in speaking of this fight I do not attempt to paint a picture of a struggle between the forces of darkness and light. Men fought me because they were sincere, because they believed it impossible to administer these roads without politics and that any one who did call it possible was a fool. Sometimes they called me a three-cited circus showman and a four-flusher. They meant it and they believed it."

It had not been a struggle between evil and good; it had begun as a legitimate battle between two rival concerns; until the unexpected success of the weaker, allied to the peculiar political illusion that prosperity had come to stay for good, had carried competition beyond the bounds of sanity, and—to those who looked behind the immediate problems—as a clash of elements that lay deeper in the economic structure.

And even in the summer of 1931, when the campaign of sabotage launched against the Canadian National had developed a sinister note, it was still, in the final analysis, not a struggle between the forces of darkness and light. But it had been removed from the realms of decency.

DARK IMPLEMENTS

Dark agents and darker implements had been brought into play; all the pettiness of which the words were capable, all the narrow prejudices, the shallow enthusiasms and fitful hatreds of communities dominated by unprincipled sections of the country's press had been assembled to discredit the man whose removal was essential to the forces with which he was in conflict. While the Montreal Gazette lectured in the tones of the elder statesman, and the Financial Post spoke in the accents of a troubled guardian of the nation's finances, the Toronto Telegram turned upon Sir Henry Thornton the full force of its rapacity for attack. And the political opportunists of 1931, straining at the leash of Parliamentary custom, were waiting for the word to spring.

The Railway Committee met again on June 8th, the first time this body had been called together since the general election. As there had been no re-definition of its function, its purpose was theoretically unaltered. Its members assembled ostensibly to report upon a bill providing for the expenditure of $48,000,000 upon the Canadian National Railways; and its terms of reference were, as they had been since its inception, of an extremely broad nature.

Within the compass of its deliberations fell any question touching upon the wisdom of the appropriation, and therefore every policy initiated by the railway management since it came into existence. The shift which had taken place in the nature and the purpose of the committee was one merely of emphasis but it was a shift so complete that it transformed that body from one of the cogs in the machinery of supervision into a weapon capable of deadly effect. Before the first two days' sittings were over, it became apparent that the railway committee had developed into an inquisition.

ANSWER FOUND

In the nature of this change which had come over a once amiable, once unspectacular, group of parliamentarians, could be found the answer to those who doubted or denied, that the railway was at the mercy of political elements. Since the private accounts, the most minute details of administration, the whole complex structure of the company could be dissected by this body and presented to the ten million people in Canada—the customers, the managers of rival concerns, the envious and the unscrupulous—the C.N.R. had no real protection against the overwhelming disadvantages such publicity entailed. The decision as to whether the road survived or went under was therefore in the hands of the Government, and had been since the railway's inception.

The argument raised—the continually reiterated argument—was that the people of Canada were the shareholders and therefore entitled to know—a sum of knowledge which, incidentally, was denied to that of a private corporation than some committee members that year were willing to admit. The final answer to that argument was that a private corporation does not aggressively wash its dirty linen, nor reveal its legitimate troubles, in public for the benefit of its competitors and that, if such a procedure were resorted to, it might just as well go into liquidation and save the time and expense involved.

"It is second only to the agricultural problem of the country. I refer to the tourist business of Canada. It nets to this country annually a sum which is not less than $300,000,000. It depends upon the fishing clubs, golf courses and it depends upon our hotels. In other words, the point I want to make is that this tourist industry . . . is not exactly the business of the Canadian Pacific, nor of the Canadian National, it is the business of the country as a whole . . . The Canadian Pacific Railway has always been distinguished for wisdom and sagacity in management, and I make that statement quite sincerely and, as a railway man, I sincerely believe it. In the years from 1923 to 1930 their contribution to this tourist business—their investments in hotels, both new hotels and additions to old hotels, were represented by the capital sum of $45,000,000 . . . The contribution of the Canadian National in the same period is $16,000,000."

TOTAL EXPENDITURES

The total expenditures in successive years upon employees told the story of the railway's rise and fall more graphically than any other statistical material which Sir Henry could present. In 1923, 108,-

His head bearing indications that his slayer had to be entrusted to scalp him, the body of Dr. Silber C. Peacock (above), 40-year-old Chicago children's specialist, was found in his automobile after he had been lured from home by a fake call to attend a sick child. Police sought a man with whom Peacock had had a violent quarrel recently.

NEW TREATY OF PEACE TO FAVOR ITALY

pean affairs that the duce could be missed.

With the disappearance of Sir Samuel Hoare, the pro-Mussolini current in the British cabinet has by no means vanished. Mr. Stanley Baldwin specifically approved the Laval-Hoare proposals in the House of Commons. More than that, Mr. Baldwin added that if he could reveal the real motifs which led to the formulation of the proposals he had in mind, no doubt that the House would not hesitate a moment to back Sir Samuel Hoare.

The choice of the great powers, France and England, therefore narrows down to the following: Let Mussolini drift into a debacle and endanger the existence of the Fascist regime in Italy, or save Mussolini by securing him an "honorable" peace. The Ethiopian cause has become a matter of secondary consideration.

What will the new proposals be, since it is clear neither France nor England desire an Italian military fiasco in Africa nor a collapse of the Fascist regime?

OLD TREATY STANDS

The new proposals have been made. They are old, that is they have been made once before. But Mr. Baldwin has recently re-stated them in the House of dommons.

Mr. Baldwin declared in parliament on Wednesday, Dec. 11, that the agreement entered into between France and Italy on the subject of Ethiopia ten years ago remains standing today.

The agreement gives Britain a mortgage on the waters of Tana Lake and of the Blue Nile in Abyssinia. Under the terms of the same agreement Great Britain undertakes to support Italy in obtaining territorial and economic advantages in the Ethiopian empire."

These territorial and economic advantages surpass by far what was contained in the Laval-Hoare peace proposals.

In other words Britain is pledged to help Italy to dismember the empire of Emperor Haile Selassie. The pledge was made ten years ago. Mr. Baldwin said on Dec. 11 last that it holds good today.

Those "real motives" have not changed. They are Mussolini's definite warning to Mr. Pierre Laval, prime minister of France, that Italy will consider any sharpening of the sanctions against Italy, and M. Laval's secret announcement to the British government that France would not stand by Britain in the event of a conflict with Italy.

Mussolini has not withdrawn his threats. Pierre Laval is still prime minister. No more than a change in the French foreign policy when M. Laval is overthrown, but in the time that France will not be a partner to an accentuation of the sanctions against Italy.

The Italian situation would have reached a stalemate and Mussolini's only course would be to double his military effort, which—but of this he is not capable, in the estimation of neutral military observers. Not because he has not the resources, because the Italian soldiers are inferior to the Ethiopian soldiers, but because the Italian exchequer cannot stand the additional strain. So far the Italian people have financed the war and the daily upkeep of the expeditionary force in Africa comes to 24 millions. Italian foreign credit is at a standstill. The gold reserve is dwindling rapidly.

The annexation of important parts of the Ethiopian empire by Italy is therefore a fore-ordained conclusion, not only in Rome but in London. And in Paris as well, for Sir Pierre Laval gave Mussolini full decision on Dec. 4, 1935, that France would not hinder an Italian expedition of conquest.

It will be extraordinary difficult to offer Mussolini anything less 'in the future than was included in the Laval-Hoare proposals. To accept less would smack too much of defeat. That is why the military situation in Africa, or the economic situation in Italy, or the diplomatic situation in Europe, will force Mussolini to accept a peace which will leave Duce in a less favorable position than he is today. But that is just what France and England and Britain seek to prevent. They do not want Mussolini's position to get worse. Therefore the next peace proposals will not differ a great deal from the Laval-Hoare plan. Most likely they will be still more favorable to Italy.

But they will not be published prematurely in the world's press. That is where the mistake lay with the Laval-Hoare plan. It got too much publicity. The diplomats will be more cautious next time.

000 men had been employed and paid wages totalling $154,000,000. During the two succeeding years, as co-ordination and reorganization had taken place, the total had diminished to 102,000 and then to 90,000; from then on it had risen, as the railway had developed and expanded upon the reorganized basis, until it reached the peak of 1928, with a total employment of 108,782 and a payroll of almost $170,000,000. As the depression had settled the figures had dwindled again to 100,000 employees for 1930, with a lugubrious forecast of only 88,190 during employment by the end of 1931—at a payroll of $142,000,000.

The railway was still attempting to save on its labor bill although there could be false economy in this respect may I say that you have to take into consideration the people who are employed on the railway. They have certain rights that have to be regarded by both the Government, as I understand it, and by the railway company itself. You cannot turn a horde of people loose upon the street and merely transfer the burden of their maintenance from the railway company to the city or to the province or to the federal government.

COMPLICATION NOW ARISES IN EUROPE CRISIS

Hitler Might Plan Fortification of Demilitarized Rhineland

By The Canadian Press

Reports in both London and Paris Chancellor Hitler might be considering fortification of the demilitarized Rhineland added a new complication today to the European situation arising out of the Italo-Ethiopian war.

Diplomatic quarters in London last night indicated Hitler had reserved the right to fortify this area if an Anglo-French mutual assistance air pact went into effect.

Paris newspapers expressed fear recent German attacks on the Anglo-French mutual aid agreement foreshadowed such a move by Germany. (It has been denied in London the agreement concerned France's northeast frontier in any way).

While Sweden formally protested to Italy against the bombing of a Swedish ambulance unit, the Ethiopian government asserted 10 persons were killed or wounded Jan. 10 when bombs wrecked a church during a Fascist air raid on Sakota. Ten others were blinded by gas bombs, the communique asserted.

Emperor Haile Selassie, who is at Desseye, indicated to the Archbishop of the Coptic Christian Church at Addis Abeba that he intended next week to proceed to the northern front at Quoram to lead his forces in that area.

Italy official denied rumors of peace moves by asserting "nothing positive can be done now at Geneva."

A number of units of Britain's home fleet sailed for a "spring cruise" off Gibraltar and the French Atlantic fleet prepared to sail Wednesday for manoeuvres off French Morocco.

May Not Send Special Delegation

Copyright 1936, by Havas News Agency

ROME, Jan. 15.—Italy is convinced the League of Nations council session Monday will have no decisive effect on the Ethiopian war that the government may not send a special delegation, informed circles said last night.

Reports that France has assurance Italy under no circumstances will attack Great Britain and will stay in the League whatever happens, were described as "fantastic", especially the latter.

Semi-official circles said also all the many reported new peace moves have no basis.

BLAST WRECKS I.O.O.F. HALL

WHEATLEY, Ont., Jan. 15.—An explosion of undetermined origin wrecked the Oddfellows building here this morning, causing damage estimated at $50,000. The two-storey building was flattened by the blast.

Jurymen Want To Bring Nightshirts

PARIS, Jan. 15 — Jurors in France's Stavisky scandal trial asked the court Tuesday for permission to bring their nightshirts before they are locked up to deliberate on the 1,600 questions asked since the trial began Nov. 4.

A mallard duck has nested every year since 1927 in a box on a barn roof at Rainbow's End game refuge, Sheridan county, Neb.

Canuck Puck Chasers Denied French Citizenship

PARIS, Jan. 15.—The French government today denied citizenship to three Canadian hockey players who were to represent France in the winter Olympic games, at Garmisch-Partenkirschen.

The naturalization board ruled that the men, Dollard Belhumeur, Francois Cadorette, and M. Gagnon, did not furnish the requisite documents and had not lived for a sufficient time in France. The decision came as a severe blow to France's hopes for a championship team.

ONTARIO TAX LEGISLATION IS REVEALED

Provincial Income Tax Will Replace Municipal Levies

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—In a surprise move last night, Acting Premier Nixon made public details of the Ontario government's provincial income tax legislation to be introduced at the next legislative session, opening Jan. 21. The provincial tax will replace municipal levies, collected by most cities, and the municipalities will be reimbursed.

All annual incomes of more than $1,000 for single persons and of more than $2,000 for married persons will be taxed. These statutory exemptions are the same as the federal income tax exemptions. Exemptions amounting to $400 for each child or dependent are permitted.

NET $15,000,000 YEARLY

Copies of the bill, which will net the provincial treasury $15,000,000 a year, will be in the hands of all members of the legislature by today or Thursday, Mr. Nixon said, in order that they may have time in which to study it before the house assembles.

While the government's action in making public details of a bill yet to be introduced was almost unprecedented, Mr. Nixon said he and his associates considered the course to be a proper one under the circumstances. Municipalities must up for, with a minimum of delay, how they will shape up financially under the provincial arrangement, in so far that they may budget for this year, he said.

The province proposes to apply the tax to 1936 income.

"The co-operation of all members of the house in expediting this business," said the Acting Premier in a form letter accompanying every mailed copy of the bill, "will be gratefully appreciated."

Fishing Industry Probe Is Requested

NEW WESTMINSTER, B. C., Jan. 15.—Tom Reid, M.P. for New Westminster, announced Tuesday he had asked the federal minister of fisheries for a royal commission to investigate all phases of the fishing industry in British Columbia.

Inspection of canned salmon and operation of nets will be particularly requested. Mr. Reid said the investigation was required to remedy unsettled conditions.

The last royal commission investigation of the fishing industry was carried out in 1922 with beneficial results, he stated.

Man Badly Burned When Lard Blazes

J. C. Clark was taken to hospital suffering burns on the right hand, head and back, received when fire damaged his home, a small shack at the rear of 9833 100 street, Tuesday afternoon. Clark said he was rendering lard which boiled over on the hot stove, causing the blaze, which occurred about 4:20 p.m.

IT'S EASY IF YOU KNOW HOW SAY EXPERTS

Government Poultrymen Give Demonstration of Plucking Fowl

"As easy as taking off your coat," said Roy Ennismore, chief of the Edmonton offices of the Dominion Poultry Services, as one of his men, Len Dawes, demonstrated to Tuesday night crowds at the Alberta Poultry Show just how a chicken should be plucked the new way.

"It's just like dipping chocolates," explained Mr. Ennismore as Mr. Dawes plunged a chicken into a pot of wax heated to 120 degrees.

"Just like hanging up your hat," continued narrator Ennismore as plucker Dawes hung the thoroughly waxed bird up on a rack to dry.

SO VERY EASY

In rapid succession, Dawes dipped ten birds three times each to build up the wax coat and by the time the tenth and last chicken was hung up the first was ready for "the works."

"Just like peeling a banana," continued Mr. Ennismore as Mr. Dawes took down the first bird to be plucked, held its centre and started off the wax coating. With the wax, which was removed in less time than it takes to tell, went a lot of corn, came all the scurf, feathers and fine hair from the chicken.

To prepare the poultry for this scientific de-hairing each bird must be stripped of its feathers down to the troublesome and hard-to-remove fuzz.

The process is strictly a wholesale proposition for farmers marketing 30 or more birds at one time.

The wax can be boiled up again and filtered through a fine mesh to remove the feather wastage and prepare the solution for use again.

The new wax process plucks the meat as clean of hair and fuzz as a billiard ball; and thus the same general effect on the bird as a musical plaster has when it is stripped from a tender human chest.

One pound of wax is used for 30 birds and a farmer can set himself back only $20 with a wax boiler, two medium size pots, a small pan and a thermometer.

"As easy as taking off your glasses," concluded Mr. Ennismore owlishly as Mr. Dawes, the wax plucker hung up ten white, shining birds, stripped clean of hair, innocent of fuzz and all "ready for market."

SURE BRUNO RIGHT MAN

HOPEWELL, N. J., Jan 15.—The Sourland Mountain people, who shared the anguish of Neighbor Charles Lindbergh and his family when their infant son was kidnapped nearly four years ago, looked forward to Bruno Richard Hauptmann's execution with almost unanimous belief that "they got the right man."

Their grudge against Hauptmann is ascribed to two things:

1—The crime itself.

2—A belief it will prevent Hopewell from becoming a community of wealthy families from the cities, ringed by vast estates such as that of Col. Lindbergh.

Contract Bridge

By E. V. Shepard

PLANNING ATTACK

Sometimes it is no better than a guess to try picking the best method of fulfilling declarer's contract. Today's hand offered such a problem to East, who studied the holdings of his side and the opening lead, and then chose the incorrect method of play.

Bidding went: West, 1-Club; East, 2-Spade; West, 2-No Trumps; East, 3-Spades; West, 4-Diamonds; East, 4-Spades.

The opening lead was the K of diamonds, and declarer was in with his Ace. From declarer's point of view, establishment of diamonds could be accomplished, giving him 5 spade tricks; no hearts required; a single low diamond trick could be won, making 2 tricks total for the suit; 3 tricks could be won in clubs, or a total of 10 tricks.

Dummy's Ace of spades took the second trick, and its 3 clubs were run. On them declarer had to choose which red suit to discard. He let go his 3 hearts. Had the 4 adversely held trumps been divided 2-2, or had the 4 adversely held diamonds been held 2-2, all would have been well. With the two bad breaks of opposing strength, declarer was unable to capture 4 opposing spades, and at the same time stand being ruffed 3 times, and he went down on his game contract.

Suppose declarer had let go his 3 low diamonds on dummy's 3 club tricks, and kept his 3 low hearts. Declarer's first 8 tricks would have been the Ace of diamonds, Ace of spades and the 3 top honors held in clubs. After that have play go lead the 9 of clubs. East will ruff. Lead the 8 of spades, then lead the 7 of spades, giving North the first defensive trick.

North will ruff declarer, by leading the thirteenth club. For the tenth trick declarer will lead his last trump, picking up the last remaining spade, and leaving him with his three low hearts. The way that played the hand, each remaining player has just 3 hearts. Lead a low heart. South will play low. Wants 3 of hearts will force North either to overplay with his Q or to lose the one added trick required by declarer to make game. No matter how North plays his hearts he will win 2 tricks and he must give the boys a single trick in the suit.

Five spade tricks, 1 heart trick, 1 diamond trick and 3 club tricks, making a total of 10 tricks, just give East an easy game, while his pet method of playing the contract left him a trick down.

Two Fliers Killed

ROME, Jan. 15.—Two military fliers were killed Tuesday when a reconnaissance plane crashed at the Capo Di Chino airport. They were Sergeant-Major Alfonso Barricelli and Sergeant Francesco Capriotti.

EVEN EMPEROR OF ETHIOPIA MUST GO GET HIS CABLES

this. Then they'd see the vanishing civilians winding over the hills and wire that Harar had been evacuated and there was nothing to fight over.

Some days labor gangs — men, women and little children—worked all of them stripped to the waist.

Looting was routine stuff. Both farmers and townspeople suffered from the demands of invaders who streaked in one day, seized whatever they could lay hands on, then vanished again. Government officials promised all sorts of heroic measures to stamp out this looting, but when a huge, hungry and unpaid army is on the march without kitchen or commissariat supplies of any sort whatever, what can you expect? Men must eat.

SOME EFFORTS

Some efforts were made at sanitation and the city numbered among its more important dignities, the garbage man. This man of property and his various aides looked on their function as a big event. They had carts hitched to camels which they drove from door to door collecting waste.

Privacy was an unknown luxury from the outer world and everyone knew pretty well what the other fellow was doing if he chose to find out. If a cablegram came for you, for instance, this could not be left with anyone but yourself. No hotel clerk dared sign for it, nor could you go to the post-office and collect it in person. It had to be delivered, and the fact that this delivery sometimes took three days was of no consequence. If, as, and when the delivery boy caught up with you he handed you all the cables in his possession. On top you'd find a half dozen addressed to the emperor. The fact that the Conquering Lion of Judah was in Addis Abeba instead of Harar was of no importance whatever. If he wanted his cable he'd have to come and get it. But you paved through the batch. Here was something for the bank, here something for His Britannic Majesty's consul. You were at liberty to read these if you tipped the delivery boy.

Since they were mostly written in English or French, and the delivery boy didn't read English or French, you could extract any message, say it was for you and keep it.

CORRESPONDENTS ON PARADE

Like the army itself, which would swell from 1,000 to 35,000 in a day, then shrink to a mere 800 over night, the correspondents came and went with regularity.

Beside the everlasting come and go of troops, ammunition, machine-guns, field pieces and various ambulances were pounding over the roads or sneaking up the passes on the backs of protesting camels.

The ambulances were new and shiny and were manned by rather frightened Egyptians. They seemed topheavy and frequently bogged down in sandy riverbeds which provided no obstacle to the fleet cars of picturesque correspondents who were patrolling this area energetically on the hunt for bloody incidents.

These lads, mostly Frenchmen, were having the time of their lives. They wore gorgeous uniforms and were hung about with such wartike equipment as pistols, water bottles and binoculars, not to mention shrill whistles, map cases and cameras. One of these, a youth in his early twenties and therefore no battle-scarred veteran, wore a pale blue creation worthy of Herman Goering at his loudest, his chest ablaze with gilt medals.

Thinking I'd come fresh from Djibouti rather than Jijiga, he told me the usual fantasies about galloping herds of wild beasts desiccating Italian invaders at upland water holes. This bedtime story and the one about the mysterious and beautiful Princess Wazizo, who was leading an army of fanatical females against Italy's terrified black troops were the two favorites of the cute young men in the pretty suits.

REMINDED OF MANDALAY

They reminded me of bazaar soothsayers in Mandalay because Burma's enchantresses, for a fee, will steep you in the romance of the beautiful princess who marched across the mountain to avenge her love with such glamorous histrionics that you almost believe it in spite of yourself.

The Oriental in me suspects that half the exciting rumors which were rushed by eager and highly paid runners to these gaudy correspondents had their origin in the sheets of the Story Tellers, of which every eastern city has at least one. Why not, a bazaar enchantress only charges a nickel, but prime rumors were selling in Diredawa at $60 a dozen.

The railhead was busy, the hotel jammed. There were far fewer reporters now but more lecturers and a surprising number of amateur hospital workers. These, both men and women, were a rather sorry and disillusioned lot. They had come out, sometimes amid much home-town ballyhoo, to offer their services to the Negus. They wanted neither pay nor glory and in many cases had brought instruments and other equipment with them, only to be soaked high duty on this and be told, with but scant tact, that the army neither needed nor wanted their help.

WAS NO LOOTING

There was no looting by nomadic tribesmen and no shooting of blood allies in or near Diredawa, because France had a regiment on hand to see there to guard the railway and other French interests. It seemed strange for Ethiopian defenders of their homeland to be ordered about by these blackest of all black warriors from the other side of the continent just because these chaps wore French uniforms, but all war is madness anyhow.

The downbound Rhinoceros Express was jammed with priests. Black priests in fancy clothes. There, as we neared the frontier post between Ethiopia and French Somaliland, grew visibly nervous and when the customs men climbed aboard the coach some of them turned grey.

Unless you hold a special waiver from the government you must sell everything you possess, both going in and coming out of Ethiopia.

The inspectors set about us with frenzied energy. They searched our pockets, tossed clothes and other gear this way and that and finally flabbergasted the priests by finding a sizable hoard of thalers. Strict laws forbid the export of Ethiopian money and any found on departing travellers is seized. From these dusky men of God they collected about $100, then decided to give me a second going-over because I had no kit at all. Nothing was found on me, although I did have two thalers in my pocket.

For a rail journey that has been described by experts as hideous and terrible, this was not so awful and we rolled into Djibouti on the tick of schedule where I was promptly bitten by a small and evil-looking dog.

TECH TEACHERS HEAR HILTON

The regular meeting of the Edmonton Teachers of Practical Arts Association was held on Saturday, January 11, 1936, at the Hudsonia. Twenty-two members heard with interest Mr. Hilton speak on the topic, "A World Survey of Technical Education on the Secondary School level."

In his talk Mr. Hilton showed, by charts and explanations, the relative value, advantages, and disadvantages of the English system, of the Kirkaldy Omnibus School, and of the system operated in New South Wales in comparison with our own system in Alberta.

Mr. Hilton proposes to deal with other systems at some later meeting of the association.

Runaway Trail For Boy At End

The run-away trail came to an end for one of two boys who fled the children's shelter the day before Christmas when he was arrested by Detective K. O'Brien, city police, Tuesday.

Picked up by police the boy has confessed to a number of breakins and petty thefts and will be brought before the Juvenile court. The other boy is expected to be picked up shortly.

Mike Glubish reported theft of his overcoat from his room at 9630 103 avenue. A. W. Heavenor told police that a suitcase owned by his sister, Mrs. A. Penner, was stolen from his shop at 10031 Jasper Ave. It contained two dresses and other clothing.

Although India is only a little more than half as large as the United States, it contains three times as many people.

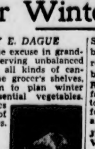
Canned Vegetables For Winter Vitamins

By MARY E. DAGUE

There was some excuse in grandma's day for serving unbalanced meals, but with all kinds of canned goods on the grocer's shelves, it is no problem to plan winter menus with essential vegetables. Here are recipes that make use of canned vegetables.



Sister Mary

LIMA BEAN CROQUETTES

Two cups cooked lima beans, 2 tablespoon minced onion, 2 tablespoons melted butter or bacon fat, ½ cup canned tomato, ¼ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce, flour, egg, dried bread crumbs, salt and pepper. Canned or cooked dried limas can be used. Put beans through food chopper. Melt fat or butter and brown the onion. Add beans, tomato and seasonings. Cook over a low fire, stirring to prevent sticking, until thick. It will take about ten minutes. Spread on a platter to cool and become firm. Form into croquettes, roll in flour, dip in egg slightly beaten with 1 tablespoon water. Roll in crumbs and fry in deep hot fat. The fat should be hot enough to brown an inch cube of bread in forty seconds, or 385 degrees F. on a fat thermometer.

JELLIED SAUERKRAUT VEGETABLE SALAD

This is an unusual salad that is inviting on a cold January night when pork in some fashion is to be served.

One and one-half cups sauerkraut juice, 1 tablespoon granulated gelatin, 4 tablespoons sugar, ½ cup diced celery, ½ cup carrot strawn, ½ cup diced cooked beets, 2 drops tabasco sauce, mayonnaise, lettuce.

Soften gelatin in cold water for five minutes. Bring sauerkraut juice to boiling point and add softened gelatin. Add sugar and stir until sugar and gelatin are dissolved. Let cool a few minutes and add lemon juice and tabasco sauce. When mixture begins to thicken, add vegetables. Turn into a mold and let stand on ice to chill and become firm. Unmold on a bed of lettuce and serve with mayonnaise. If a ring mold is used, fill the center with hearts of lettuce garnished with snips of pimento.

BAKED EGGS WITH SPINACH AND BACON

This dish is really a triumph because the staunchest spinach dissenter will eat and forget he's eating spinach.

One cup cheese sauce, 1½ cups cooked spinach (it will take about 2 pounds fresh spinach to make this amount cooked), ½ teaspoon horseradish, 4 eggs, 4 thin slices of bacon.

Mix horseradish thoroughly with spinach. Put 4 tablespoons cheese sauce in the bottom of each of four individual ramikins. Add a layer of spinach and break an egg onto this. Sprinkle with pepper and cover with bacon cut to fit ramikin. Bake in a moderate oven until eggs are set and bacon is crisp.

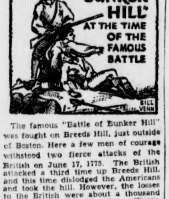
The Debunker

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.



The famous "Battle of Bunker Hill" was fought on Breeds Hill, just outside of Boston. Here a few men of courage withstood two fierce attacks of the British on June 17, 1775. The British attacked a third time up Breeds Hill, and this time dislodged the Americans and took the hill. However, the losses to the British were about a thousand men, including eighty-nine officers. This battle encouraged the American men so much that they continued their fight for freedom. In 1843 a marble monument 221 feet high was erected on Breeds Hill to commemorate the occasion and Daniel Webster delivered the main address. The hill has for many years been called "Bunker Hill," which is the name of another hill nearby.

Green vegetables also are yellow; they average one part yellow to 3½ parts green.

More than two-thirds of the population of the British Empire is located in India.

Set of Guide Posts Along Road of Life

In case you hadn't time to make any New Year's resolutions for yourself, how about using a few of these? Let us all resolve: To be more cheerful and to discard the crepe hounjery we have worn for the last five years. Let's quit talking about depression and how much money we lost in the banks. Let's stop telling hard-luck stories. Let's nail on our faces the smile that won't come off and stiffen our backbones to meet whatever comes. Let's be men and women and not cry babies.

Dorothy Diz

Let's resolve to commit fewer murders and maim fewer old people and children by driving our cars at a decent speed and observing the rules of the road. Let's have a heart and show compassion to our neighbors by not keeping our radios going at full blast with the loud-speakers on all day and half the night.

Let's resolve to remember that God helps those who help themselves and loafs out and get jobs for ourselves, instead of waiting for the government to feed us and somebody to find us a nice, easy situation with big pay and little work.

Let's resolve to turn the spotlight on the good points of all those with whom we have to live, and soft-pedal their faults. Let's resolve to be kinder to each other and more helpful, and treat each other as we would like to be treated. The Golden Rule is old stuff, but it still works.

Diet Is Essential To Obtain Figure Beauty

By GLADYS GLAD

The Sage who remarked that beauty lies in the eyes of the beholder certainly was right. Over in Turkey, for instance, women must be plenty beefy to be considered attractive. A slender lass doesn't stand the ghost of a chance over in that part of the globe. While in China, feminine curves and contours are strictly taboo. A lass has to be thin and flat-cheated to rate with the Chinese lads. Really, it's all more or less a matter of opinion.

As Ann Sothern, screen player, will tell you, however, the standards of figure beauty in this country demand a firm, slender figure that possesses femininely rounded contours. Ann herself possesses just such a figure—and she attributes it in part to the sensible well-balanced diet that she maintains. Ann never gorges herself on foods that she knows won't do her any good. But, she says, there are some girls who are thoughtlessly overindulge in foods that aren't conducive to health and to figure loveliness.

Take it from me, it's the wise baby who chooses a sensible method of reducing. A carefully planned dieting and exercising routine such as the one outlined in my "New Figure" booklet, for instance, is an ideal type. For such a routine will reduce weight most effectively without having any detrimental effects on the health or the symmetry of the body.

COUNT YOUR CALORIES

However, for the woman who likes to plan her own menus, calorie counting is a good procedure to follow in reducing. The amount of calories required each day varies, of course, with the individual. But there's a system whereby the average girl can figure out with ease the amount of calories her body needs. If she is a normally active woman, her normal intake of food daily should range from sixteen to twenty calories for each pound of her normal weight. If, for instance, her normal weight is 115 pounds, her diet, to supply the needs of her body, should have a calorie value of from 1,840 to 2,300. And if she wants to reduce she should cut down her normal intake of food by about 1,000 calories per day. This will not only check any weight increase, but will also force the body to draw on its reserves of fat, and thus bring about weight reduction.

A BEDTIME STORY

Story by HAL. COCHRANE Pictures by GEORGE SCARBO

The tiger Scouty lassoed was a very frightened beast because he'd never seen the Tinymites. For moments he was still.

And then he howled and jerked him run away. Here's where you get a dandy treat. Just watch me! It will be a lot of sport."

He pulled the rope that held the beast. Then, in a moment, 'twas about, just hoping he'd escape, no doubt. Wee Dotty loudly shouted "Let him go, lads, or I will."

"Now, wait," cried Scouty. "That's not fair. I gave this little beast a scare, and now I'm going to show him that I'm quite a friendly sort.

"If I can't tame him I will let released. The tiger shortly seemed to know that all was quite all right.

Instead of running, he just sat. Fair Goldy shouted, "Look at that! Already he's making friends. Now, isn't that a sight?"

Then Scouty crawled right up and said, "Hey, let me pat your little head. I am not going to hurt you." Then he stroked the tiger twice.

The little fellow snuggled near. It seemed that he had lost his fear. "I told you so," said Scouty. "Now he thinks that I am nice."

* * *

The Tinies' friend, the hunter, said, "That's fine. Now you go right ahead and play with him. I'm going to try to make a trap or two."

"This time I'll catch some beasts, I know, and then I'll put on quite a show." Wee Coppy said, "If you don't mind, I'll go along with you."

They found a large hole in the ground with leaves and twigs piled all around. "We're going to cover up that hole," the man said, with a grin.

"Then we will hide behind a tree and very shortly you will see some beast go walking over it, and quickly fall right in."

(Duncy spoils the hunter's plans in the next story.)

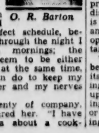
Your Children -

By OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

"When I read articles on child training, I get dreadfully discouraged," confessed a young mother. "I picture a sort of place where everything is under control, where push-buttons run the machinery and the children move on tracks.



O. R. Barton

"According to writers on care and guidance, everything must be perfect. I think they build up dream houses in their minds and dream children, too.

"My house is small; I never have enough of everything to keep them dressed well; I can't run a perfect schedule, because if I'm up through the night I have to sleep mornings; the youngsters all seem to be either naughty or sick at the same time, and it's all I can do to keep my head above water and my nerves from ruin."

"You have plenty of company, my dear," I assured her. "I have the same phobia about a cook-book, or one on furnishing beautiful houses, or a handbook on gardening. I am forever compagned," confessed a young mother. "I picture a sort of place where everything is under control, where push-buttons run the machinery and the children move on tracks.

"You have plenty of company, my dear," I assured her. "I have the same phobia about a cook-book, or one on furnishing beautiful houses, or a handbook on gardening. I am forever comparing what I have and what I can do with pictured standards completely beyond my reach.

SISTERS UNDER THE SKIN

"And I used to feel the same inferiority about my little family. There were only one or two sketchy books then on child-care and feeding, and none on psychology. Just the same, I've fired my 'guide' across the room many a time and cried, 'It's impossible to do the best I can. What does that writer expect of a woman with only two hands?'"

"Don't you feel that way now?" she seemed surprised.

"Absolutely. In fact, I feel it so deeply that I seldom write an article without breathing a silent prayer that it may help without discouraging too many. My hope is to correct a bad situation here and there and help children by opening the parents' eyes to certain possibilities or dangers.

"But always I see the rumpled beds to be made, the kitchen with its stove and sink doing everlasting service, the children tearing up the house. I see them stamping in covered with snow or mud, or having tantrums, or quarreling, and the mother making a daily path through all this chaos, trying to preserve her health and disposition at the same time. I never think of any home as a laboratory to work out experiments in guidance."

TO BE FOLLOWED OR DISCARDED

"But you write that way."

"Toward standard, that is all. Everything we do should have some star to move toward. And I believe that once the mother begins to understand the reasons behind a child's acts and behavior, she may be able to remedy in a day that which could continue to worry her for years."

"Then you don't expect mothers to do all that the books are preaching?"

"There never was a child specialist, and never will be, who could do one-tenth of the things he mortifies on in the quiet of his study. The way for you to read any book, or article, is to be as ready to discard it, with a clear conscience, as to use it. With the obsession removed, you may be more encouraged and lose a very natural feeling of antagonism."

"I feel better already," she declared. "I'll just muddle on through."

"Yes, just muddle through."

Sculpture In Italy Reached To Perfection

"Standing on the shoulders," so to speak, of the great Italian masters, Ghiberti and Donatello, their disciples, Verrocchio, Malano and Bernardo Rossellino, and Antonio Rossellino, reached new planes of classical perfection, originality and unusual beauty in their sculpture. Thus, Mrs. E. K. Broadus began to unfold another chapter in the fascinating history of the art of Italy, in the second of a series of lectures, which was largely attended in the Museum and Arts Gallery of the Civic Block on Tuesday evening.

In the exquisite mingling of adorned and unadorned spaces in his monument of the Cardinal of Portugal, Bernardo Rossellino has indeed attained the "golden mean" of ornament and the beautiful sepulchural monument, has been paid tribute as "Mozart in Marble."

Perhaps the finest equestrian statue in Europe is Verrochio's famous "Colleoni" in Venice, with the ease of a goldsmith fashioning soft gold, the artist has twisted and modelled the bronze into such an unusual portrayal of fire, splendor and power that the figure of the strong and defiant soldier and his mount, has been termed "One of the greatest triumphs and mysteries of the Renaissance."

A remarkable feature of Verrochio's bronze figure of "David" is the half smile which illuminates his fine and classical face. This smile is known as the dawn of the famous "Mona Lisa" smile.

Among the wonderfully elaborate pulpits fashioned toward the end of the period, is one depicting the life of St. Francis. Hanging like a great bird's nest on the pillar, its tiny spiral staircase is hidden from view by the huge polygonal figure which supplied the everyday needs of the artistic Renaissance, is revealed at his best.

In her third lecture, which will commence promptly at a quarter past eight o'clock on Tuesday evening of next week in the Museum of Arts gallery, Mrs. Broadus will consider "Italian Painters."

"Is Business Business" . . . Just a Play To The Junior Hospital League

MISS MARJORIE BARFORD,
past president of the Junior Hospital League and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Barford, who as cast of Life Underwriters' "Is Business Business," will take part in the League play and spring fashion show.

"Is Business Business?" The Junior Hospital League is answering just that important question right now . . . not in an official, over-the-desk sort of way, but in a manner magnetic with the cleverness and ingenuity which makes them leaders in activities social, and social service, among many groups. "Is Business Business" . . . is a playlet, of which Miss Mae Massie is the author and director, designed to introduce a fashion show, sponsored by the T. Eaton Company Limited, to be held in the Macdonald hotel on Wednesday evening, February 12, commencing at half-past eight o'clock.

The Junior Hospital League play, of course, has a purpose . . . that is why the title applies so pertinently to their own particular interests. The swimming pool, which was a generous and costly gift to the little crippled children in the University hospital, is a financial obligation, as well, and proceeds from the play and fashion show will be utilized for this purpose.

Miss Winnifred Sutton is assisting Miss Massie with the production of "Is Business Business."

In the cast are Mrs. Charles Learmouth, Misses Marjorie Barford, Minerva Jacox, Peg. O'Connor, Lorna Macdonald, Bunch Douglas, Mrs. Wilfred Hutton, Mrs. Leigh Brintnell. Models for the fashion show will be Mrs. Art. Emery, Mrs. Armour Ford, and Miss Alice Mary Carpenter.

MISS MAE MASSIE, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Massie, who is author and director of "Is Business Business."

The collection is being hung in the Art Gallery at present, and for this reason the Gallery will be closed on Wednesday and Thursday.

Old Timers Are Summoned To Round Up

"Swing your partners and balance all," if that isn't exactly what the Master of Ceremonies has to call off in old time dances as you choose partners for a square, at least any member of the Northern Alberta Pioneers and Old Timers Association will know what he means when they join the dance at the big round-up in the Macdonald hotel on Thursday evening. From many of the towns and from the suburban districts of Edmonton will rally Old Timers for the event of the year. Interest annually marks a highlight in their calendar of many entertainments. Dinner of buffalo meat, such as days of old, will be served in the hotel dining room at seven o'clock, and following a program of old-time music which Mr. C. C. Balson, president of the organization, will occupy the chair, there will be a gay round of Red River jigs, reels, polkas, and squares.

His Honor the Lieutenant-Governor will be among the guests and honorary patrons are: Mrs. Frank Oliver, Mrs. John A. McDougall, Mrs. Phillip Ottewell, Mrs. Harrison Young, Mrs. Leslie Wood, Mrs. Robt. Belcher, Mrs. D. D. McLennan, Mr. Cameron Young, Mr. W. R. West, Mr. James Ross, and Mr. C. Tregeon.

"WHAT'S THE TIME, DOC?"

THIS was asked me by an early rising tired Torontonian one morning as I turned into Bloor Street at Jarvis, up which I had walked from almost a concession road south. I had been asked before as he leaned listlessly against a pole, a cigarette stuck to his lip and waiting for a tram. 5.45 a.m. and I sped on at about five miles an hour. This fellow would most likely walk in a week as far as I had walked already, still nearly six miles to go.

At Yonge Street, a policeman who recognized me stopped to ask about constipation, walked to Bay Street. He had heard of Roman Meal but never used it, which makes one wonder why, when it is universally known that Roman Meal and constipation cannot get on together.

At Bloor entrance to Queen's Park a blazon tooted and I was asked if I'd accept a ride. I shook my head although still about five miles to go.

At Willowdale Park another set out to walk with me. I said: "If you're walking with me you must step out." "Oh, I'm a great walker. I can keep up," and he did (for most) for three blocks, then turned into a side street. I looked back two blocks farther on and saw him back again on Bloor, following. I have many such experiences. Men young enough to be my grandsons do not like to admit they are older in elasticity, flexibility, resilience and endurance of body than I am, approaching 78.

At Oshawa a man of 40 stopped to ask, "You're Doctor Jackson?" "Yes, but don't stop me. I'm trying to get seven miles to my office in ninety minutes." "That's a long walk, a long walk," he sang after me as I swung along.

I passed a church. Two men came limping out from early Mass; one had sciatica. I knew by the contracted leg and characteristic limp. The other? Arthritis? I guessed so. As I passed, No. 1 said: "It's a gol ache down my thigh," and he rubbed his hand over that area. "It's in both my knees," said No. 2, and I was out of hearing.

Almost certainly each of those persons would have thought me "a nap" had he known I was walking seven miles at that speed and would be at my desk a few minutes after 7 a.m., and would do the work of at least two women before I quit at from 7 to 9.30 p.m. Had they known, I was up at 4.30 a.m. and had already taken more exercise than most men take in a month and I would have no food until at my office and then only fruit until I would have my Roman Meal at noon. They would—well, what?

Most persons do not realize that muscles and nerves grow stronger by using, not by resting them. The digestive organ likewise grow stronger upon rougher mineral-rich, natural foods because they get more exercise. Our bodies do not lose the power to do things that young bodies do because they grow old, but they grow old because they stop doing the things young bodies do. They do not know that bodies cannot feel like doing the things young bodies do if fed upon dead, denatured, demineralized foods.

I am sure of these things. My foods and activities are exactly opposite to the conventional, and in my 78th year I can do anything the average 22-year-old can do, manifesting youthful elasticity, flexibility, resilience and endurance of body and mind, and do it better.

Who is the "nut," the "nap"? I, or the fellow who at half my years is utterly incompetent to keep pace with me?

But I am convinced that these mistaken men or women, headed for the human scrap heap in what is really middle life, could rebuild themselves so that mentally and physically they will be as bad as the girls. How? Write for my free health bulletins and find out. I can only say here, diet is the first most important step and one-third of my diet is Roman Meal, Bekus-Puddy, Lishus and Kofy-Substitute.

MRS. CASPER TAKES OFFICE AS PRESIDENT

It was with great regret that members of the Holy Trinity Church Guild have accepted the resignation of Mrs. M. A. Holloway, who for many years has effectively managed and directed their activities, but at their recent meeting at which Rev. G. G. Reynolds presided, Mrs. R. C. Casper was chosen to succeed Mrs. Holloway as president. Following the submitting of annual reports, the new executive was chosen for 1936. Mrs. M. A. Holloway and Mrs. G. G. Reynolds, honorary presidents, Mrs. F. C. Hales, vice-president, and Mrs. T. M. Walton, secretary-treasurer.

HELEN BURNS HEADS ALPINE CLUB OFFICERS

Miss Helen Burns, whose exploits as a mountain climber of the Canadian Rockies are known not only locally but abroad, was unanimously elected chairman of the Edmonton division of the Alpine Club of Canada at a luncheon meeting held recently. Capt. E. R. Gibson, in making the nomination, paid highest tribute to Miss Burns as a mountaineer and as organizer. Miss Burns' membership in the club she has been a leader in their many activities, attended winter skiing parties and hikes annually to the Alpine Club camp in the Rockies she has been one of the most enthusiastic to dare the highest peaks.

Miss Burns' other club interests are extended to that of Girl Guide organization, in which she holds a prominent office, and passes on much of her enthusiasm for outdoor life to those "in training."

Dr. H. E. Bulyea presided at the meeting at which election of officers Miss Gladyse Hartley was made secretary, with an executive committee consisting of Miss W. J. Watson, Miss Jean McDonald, Mr. J. Gregson, Capt. E. R. Gibson and Dr. H. E. Bulyea.

A vote of thanks was passed to the retiring officers, Mrs. Cyril Water, Miss W. J. Watson and the members of the 1935 executive.

Miss Mavis Booth entertained the Yolando Club at her home on Monday evening, where Miss Margaret Stevenson was the speaker for the evening. Those present were: Miss Connie Peterson, Miss Janet Clouston, Miss Jessie McDonald, Miss Florence Marshall, Miss Marge McLeod, Miss Margaret Stevenson, Mrs. Mrs. Horace W. Soley, Mrs. Hector McLean, Mrs. Edward G. Adams.

TEARS of a princess are very precious. The Canadian Post Office Department has reports that attempts have been made to forge a distinctive mark on one of Canada's Jubilee issues of postage stamps. The tiny stain of a princess's tear. The stamp that has attracted the attention of forgers is known to philatelists as "The Weeping Princess." It is a green one-cent issue, depicting Princess Elizabeth, issued some months ago to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the accession of King George, and collectors shortly discovered that in some copies there was a mark just below the right eye of the Princess that looked like a tear. The tear does not appear on all copies, but only on the left stamp in the third row from the top of certain sheets, and it is not known how many of them are in existence.

Now it has been discovered that some unscrupulous person is forging copies of the "Weeping Princess" by adding a tiny green tear to perfect copies.

We read that actual bookings for any of the scheduled sailings of the "Queen Mary" are rowding the steamship offices. Many hundreds of applications in excess of the ship's capacity, for accomodation in the de luxe space have been received by those most eager to share the adventure of the maiden voyage of the magnificent ocean liner. Don't you envy them?

GUIDES ENTERTAIN ON ANNIVERSARY

Intimate glimpses of a most interesting Guide inspection trip in the company of Lady Baden Powell, Chief Guide, were given by Mrs. E. Pardee, provincial commissioner, who spoke briefly at the annual banquet arranged recently by the Second Holy Trinity Company Guides in celebration of their eleventh anniversary. Particularly entertaining was one of the speeches of Lady Baden Powell, who was made an "honorary" member of an Indian tribe at a ceremony in Sarcee Camp.

Mrs. Robert Price of Stettler, Mrs. W. Ross of Millet, and Mrs. M. Malloy of Werner will arrive in Edmonton at the week-end to attend the board meeting of the United Farm Women of Alberta prior to the conference which commences on Tuesday, January 21. Mrs. Price as president will occupy the chair for all sessions.

With All My Love

By Mary Raymond.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

DANA STANLEY, divorced from her husband, DR. SCOTT STANLEY, is making plans to marry rich RONALD MOORE, who has been in love with her several years.

Dana had left her husband, believing him in love with PAULA LONG. Scott believes Dana left him because he was poor.

After the separation, he becomes a partner of the town's outstanding physician, DR. OSBORNE.

NANCY, Dana's half-sister, loves Ronnie, but has always concealed her feeling for him. On an impulse, she tells him Dana still loves Scott. Ronnie refuses to believe her.

With no heart in her story, Dana goes ahead with her preparations to marry Ronnie. AUNT ELLEN, Dana's romantic great-aunt, goes to DR. OSBORNE and tells him Dana and Ronnie plan to marry that night. Dr. Osborne telephones Scott, who is out of the city.

Driving at breakneak speed, Scott's car crashes with another car.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XLV

THE middle-aged man dreaded reaching the wreckage a few yards away. There would, probably, be little he could do. A smash like that could mean but one thing. There wasn't a chance in a hundred that the occupants had escaped alive.

But he saw, as he came closer, that one driver had used his head at the fatal moment. He had turned his car so that the engine of the other automobile had struck the side and not the front. This chap, he saw, too, had escaped in some almost miraculous fashion and was lifting the driver of the outbound car from the tangled mass.

The middle-aged man said: "That was a sorry smash. You're lucky. Is that poor chap dead?"

"No," Scott said, "he's badly hurt. But he isn't dead. Thank God."

"We'd better get him to a doctor at once," the stranger said.

"I'm a doctor," Scott replied. "A hospital is what we need. I'm going to take time to bandage a gash in his head, if a surgical case I have isn't smashed to bits."

The stranger stooped and held the unconscious man's head while Scott explored the back of his wrecked car. The case was located in the tangled mass, and Scott bandaged the ugly cut quickly.

"The best thing," Scott said straightening, "is to phone from the first house and have an ambulance come out and meet us."

They lifted the unconscious youth into the stranger's car and started on. Scott supporting the boy in his arms. If the kid died, he would never forgive himself. The boy had been on the wrong side of the road, driving with the recklessness and cockeureness of careless youth. But it took two to make an accident. He himself had taken a dozen risks since he left Easton. He had let his car out to 70 a number of times, holding it around 65 generally. He'd taken the curve too fast, without a thought of a careless driver around the bend. Deep in his unhappiness, he had been driving mechanically. And another's life might be the price he must pay.

The thought of Dana was like a sharp, stabbing pain. Now he could not go to her as he had planned. He must take the boy straight to an emergency room, determine the extent of his injuries and get to work.

A thought came like a reprieve from sentence. Any of his friends would be glad to help him. Some of them would be making casual rounds, and any one of them would drive and and bring Dana to him.

He knew, with a sense of deep conviction, that if he asked her to come, nothing could keep her away. It was as simple as that. All of your petty doubts and fears and suspicions fell away from you when the real crises of life came. Dana would come. And never again, please God, would anything in life separate them.

They were driving steadily and fairly fast. But not fast enough for Scott. Minutes in a case like his counted. He wanted to change places with the conservative, middle-aged driver. This time, with all his faculties alert and sharpened by the experience of the past, there would be no danger in traveling fast. Speed combined with a blackfog of unhappiness had brought this fearful affair about.

Blood had soaked through the bandage on the boy's head and was staining Scott's coat. There was so much blood on his own clothing it would be hard for an ordinary observer to tell which of the two was most hurt. Yet, except for some painful bruises, he apparently had come through unharmed.

They had reached a lighted house. Scott was praying there would be a telephone. He could hear his companion pounding on the door. Then the door swung wide and a flood of light poured through.

"An ambulance is starting to meet us," the middle-aged man reported when he returned.

"What time have you?" Scott asked.

"Six-thirty. I figure you'll be at the hospital at least by seven."

The number had a dark sound to Scott.

Dr. Osborne had not specified any particular time. He had said Dana and Ronnie were to be married tonight. That could mean they had set 8 o'clock as the hour. It could mean seven.

* * *

It was 10 minutes to seven when Dr. Harvey Robertson stopped in amazement, staring at a blood-stained, haggard, wild-eyed man, who had come in through the emergency entrance.

"Scott!" he cried. "My God! you've been in an accident."

Scott nodded. "I'm all right. The boy who is really hurt is being brought in on a stretcher. He's had a nasty blow on the head. I've got to get up to the dressing room to get into some linen—"

"You can't mean you're going to handle this case. Man alive, you are in no shape—I'd be glad to take it over for you. Or maybe, there's someone else—"

Scott broke in, grimly. "Thanks, but this is my job. I'm going to put something more into pulling this boy through than a man ordinarily gives to a case. And I'm risking something more precious to me than my life to do it. Harvey I need help—"

"You know I'll be glad to do what I can."

"Get into your car and drive like the devil to the Cameron home at 1800 Magnolia and bring my wife back with you!"

Bring ——— Dr. Robertson's mouth flew open.

"Bring her back with you. Tell her I was coming for her when this accident happened. You'll get off right away, won't you? I can't explain, but it's a case of every minute counting."

Dr. Robertson stammered, "Of course—right off."

Scott reached out and gripped the other physician's hand hard for a moment and then started on a run.

Dr. Robertson stood staring after him. Scott had looked irresponsible and he had sounded like a crazy man. Then he had made this request which had been even more insane. Sending him after his divorced wife!

He got his hat and went out into the court in the rear of the building to get his car. Two of his colleagues, Dr. Charles Warwick and Dr. Phillip Stern, were coming in together. They stopped and spoke to him.

"Your busy day over, Robertson?" Dr. Warwick asked.

He didn't relish his mission and some of his distaste was in his voice. "I made a promise to look after something for Stanley. He's all cut up over something. He's brought in an accident case. I figure he figured in it, some way."

"Probably been drinking," said Dr. Stern. "Suppose you've heard his divorced wife is getting married tonight."

"Good heavens, no!"

Dr. Stern nodded.

"I guess thats true," Dr. Warwick said. "We heard it too. The Osbornes' cook told our cook that one of the Cameron granddaughters was marrying Ronald Moore tonight. He was in love with Mrs. Stanley before she married. And since he returned from Europe, he's been camping on her doorstep, they say. Seen everywhere togi ther."

"What was it Stanley wanted you to do?" Dr. Stern asked.

"Nothing of any importance," Dr. Robertson answered. "Just a small errand . . . well, good night."

He went toward his car, waited until the two men had entered the hospital, and then slowly retraced his steps.

It was a good thing he had bumped into the two men. It was queer he hadn't suspected Scott was drinking. And here he had been planning to humor a man who probably didn't realize what a crazy request he was making. He might have known, if he had used his head, that Stanley had either been drinking or was just off a bender. Calling Dana Stanley "my wife" when they'd been divorced for months.

It would have been a pretty come-off if he had walked into the wedding and commanded the bride to accompany him to meet her former husband!

It would have been something he would never have lived down! He'd offered to take over the accident case. But he would be damned if he would make an ass of himself.

He got off on the fourth floor.

How I Keep My Figure

By CLAIRE TREVOR

Claire Trevor

DID you ever know a girl who is just like a Jack-in-the-Box? Who can never sit still for five minutes at a time? Who, if she is not rushing to the studios, is rushing from wardrobe department to make-up department, thence to the sound stage on which she works, rushing to lunch, rushing back to work, rushing round the stores to stock the kitchen ice box on the way home, and darting round the house, dusting books, rearranging flowers, sprinkling the lawns in the garden, polishing the roadster for next day, and collapsing into her bed by 10 o'clock each night, tired out?

Well, that's me. That's how I keep my figure. Each morning I am out of bed by 6 o'clock, play a set of tennis before breakfast and am away to work by 8 a.m. I take a large glass of warm water with the juice of a whole lemon on rising. Spend five minutes on breathing exercises by the open window before scrambling into my tennis togs. Then after the game I hop into the pool for a swim, take a warm shower and wrapped in a warm dressing robe, eat breakfast out of doors.

This meal consists of cereal and fruit, with coffee and one piece of toast.

For lunch I eat a large fruit and vegetable salad, followed by a milk pudding and coffee.

On arrival home at night I take a warm shower, a good substantial dinner of meat and vegetables, dessert and a glass of milk.

Occasionally, when I am working very hard, as I have been ever since I arrived in Hollywood last year, I indulge in the extravagance of a massage and steam bath. Not that I think it is particularly beneficial to weight-reducing, but because it soothes out tired nerves and invigorates the muscles of the body.

Likewise I am no believer in strict dieting when engaged in a strenuous day's work. That, to me, means the suicide of all one's ambitions. Nobody can work intelligently if their brain cells are starved. About once a month, though, for two days in succession, I put myself on a diet which consists of liquid food all day and then whatever I like for dinner. This starts a new blood stream coursing through the veins and is as good as a change of air.

Tomorrow—Maureen O'Sullivan

What To Do

By Francine Markel

I have some lovely old dessert spoons which I would like to use, but none of the homes I visit ever seem to use them. Is a dessert spoon ever used for soup? Just what are the uses of a dessert spoon?
MRS. B. J. B.

Answer—Of course, use your lovely old dessert spoons! It's a surprise to me that the dessert spoon is not used more often than it is. Certainly, it is difficult to see how any one can eat breakfast cereal without the dessert spoon. Puddings such as chocolate, tapioca, rice, bread and others should also be eaten with a dessert spoon, but not ice cream for which a teaspoon or ice cream fork is always used. You can also use your dessert spoons with soup at luncheon, except that you must not then serve the soup in bouillon cups, which would require the use of the small-size bouillon spoons.

Miss Hazelton, Stanley's anesthetist, was hurrying along the corridor. That meant he was going to operate. You had to admire him for character and cool nerve. Feeling responsible in some way for the smash up and determined to put the boy together again.

Miss Bell, floor supervisor, looked up when he passed her desk and spoke.

"The automobile accident case —pretty serious?" He asked.

"Rather, doctor. Intracranial hemorrhage. But he'll have a fine chance. Dr. Stanley's operating."

Dr. Robertson walked on. The hospital staff certainly had confidence in Stanley. Well, he was a mighty keen young surgeon. And after awhile he was going to come out of that operating room and he'd have to tell him something.

He would say something important had come up preventing him from going on Scott's mission. A man had his own professional standing to consider. And it was queer he hadn't suspected Scott was drinking. And here he had been planning to humor a man who probably didn't realize what a crazy request he was making. He might have known, if he had used his head, that Stanley had either been drinking or was just off a bender. Calling Dana Stanley "my wife" when they'd been divorced for months.

It would have been a pretty come-off if he had walked into the wedding and commanded the bride to accompany him to meet her former husband!

It would have been something he would never have lived down! He'd offered to take over the accident case. But he would be damned if he would make an ass of himself.

Two Champions Of Another Day Air Their Views

PAT'S PANS by BILL LEWIS

THERE should be a real old-fashioned hockey battle in Calgary tonight when Edmonton Eskimos tackle Tigers right in their own lair . . . Ever since the argument over ownership of Gordon "Tony" Savage started, all the old-time rivalry that existed for years between Edmonton and Calgary teams has flaired up anew . . . Especially was this bitterness in evidence Monday night when the boys were really vicious as they went about their chores, and you can figure they'll be battling more fiercely than ever when they go into action this evening.

Incidentally, the return of this old spirit of Calgary-Edmonton rivalry has stirred up a lot of the interest that had gradually been seaping away from pro hockey here-lately . . . Fans are beginning to take a new interest in the Esks, who have only been beaten once in their last seven starts . . . Their performance tonight will be watched closely.

CHIEF interest in local hockey this week is the big game Saturday night between Drumheller Miners and Dominions . . . Being the first appearance here this season of the southerners, and with them being pitted against Dominions, a tremendous amount of interest has been shown in the contest . . . Thousands of reservations for seats have already been made and by far the biggest crowd of the season to date will look on when the teams go into battle.

Miners, by the way, are the only team in Alberta that has been able to defeat Dominions this winter . . . The two clubs waged a bitter struggle in the southern mining town, though, before the home squad won out by a 1-0 margin . . . That's close enough for any hockey follower.

VISIT of Drumheller, too, will see the homecoming of young Bud Wolfe, former local goaltender who was shunned by all local team managers and who, since going south, has not lost a single game for the Miners.

One of the strangest things you'll see or hear of in a lot of hockey moons occurred in Boston last night when Tiny Thompson, Boston goaltender, was credited with an assist on a goal scored by Babe Siebert. . . . The idea of crediting goalies with anything in the scoring averages is ridiculous, for if you did it seriously, there would be lots of them I know who would be up as high in the goal-scoring column as plenty of forwards.

BULLDOGS TIE ROCHESTER, 2-2

ROCHESTER, N.Y., Jan. 15.—Windsor Bulldogs and the Rochester Cardinals played to a 2-2 overtime tie here last night in an International Hockey League game.

Each team scored in the overtime period. Ralph Rennie and Deid Klein scored for the Cards with King and "Yank" Boyd tallying for the visitors.

MINER STARS

Above are shown two starry members of Drumheller Miners, who clash with Dominions in an Inter-City Hockey League game here Saturday. Gus Gustason, left, captains the team and is well up in South Alberta League scoring averages, while Liston Anderson, right, stars on defence and has been with the club for eight years.

DRUMHELLER PUCK SEXTET PLAYING HERE

Duel of Star Netminders Expected in Contest Saturday Night

A duel between two of the greatest goal tenders in the province is expected here Saturday night when Drumheller Miners come to the city for the first time this season to meet Dominions in a scheduled Inter-City Senior hockey league fixture.

Freddy Layetzke, brilliant Dominions' netminder who has lost only one game this winter, will be pitted against the only goalie in Alberta who holds a decision over him—Bud Wolfe, former Edmonton boy who has not lost a game for the Miners since joining that team.

By a strange coincidence, Layetzke and Wolfe were team-mates on the starry E.A.C. junior team of two years ago that went to the Dominion finals, the former as regular net custodian and the latter as substitute goalie.

In the only meeting of the two teams this year, staged at Drumheller, Miners pulled out with a 1-0 victory after the sternest kind of a struggle. This defeat brought an end to a seven-game winning streak of the Dominions and Lefty Grove's men are anxious to avenge this setback Saturday.

Miners, however, will be doing a lot of battling themselves, as will young Mr. Wolfe, whose work in front of the tapestries has earned him six victories and one tie since joining the southern club. He will be anxious to show at his best in his first Edmonton appearance since going into senior company.

A near-record crowd is expected for the contest Saturday, as thousands of reservations have already been made.

CLOSE GAMES IN MIDGET LEAGUE

Two games were played last night in the City Midget Hockey League, Maple Leafs beating C.N.R. Shops to a 1-1 tie, while Jerry Chamberlain's Royal Canadians romped to a 4-2 victory over Scona.

The Leaf-E.A.C. battle was a close affair with both teams sharing honors in the play. After two torrid periods no scores had been registered by either team, and with both goalies stopping them in great manner it looked as if it might be a scoreless encounter. However, in the third frame Maple Leafs took the lead, when McFarland slapped in a smart pass from Newsome, but before the end of the frame, E.A.C.'s had evened up the count on a tally by Murdock.

In the other midget game, Royal Canucks and Scona played a fast brand of hockey, Canucks coming up strong in the third period to earn a 4-2 win.

Scona took the lead in the first canto when Fitzgerald scored unassisted, but Critchley evened up the count in the second period. In the third frame Canucks really went to work and Wotherspoon scored right at the start. Scona again made it even only to have Canucks tally twice before the end of the period and win by a 4-2 count.

Only Bat For Sultan Now

The only "stick" Babe Ruth, king of swats, swings now is one of solid mahogany and is worth $300. It was presented to the Bambino by the fans of Hilo, Hawaii, when the old home run king appeared in an exhibition game at that port, Oct. 29, 1933. The bat is one of the many treasured possessions the former swat king has left.

Bam Lucky Missing Managerial Chance

Swat King Would Hear Bronx Cheer Also Say Other Aces

This is the last of four articles on Babe Ruth, the man baseball forgot.

By HARRY GRAYSON

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Jan. 15.—Tris Speaker and others who have been close to George Herman Ruth down through the years believe that the old home run king would make a splendid manager.

There is no question but that Ruth was entitled to the opportunity he so keenly desired, but the better informed baseball men among his countless admirers are pleased that he did not fall heir to a poor club.

CLUB IS IMPORTANT

Bad clubs have made poor pilots out of smart baseball men. Good clubs have made great managers out of dumb baseball men.

Inasmuch as Ruth could not land with the New York Yankees, the Boston Red Sox, Detroit Tigers, Cleveland Indians, or one of the ranking National League organizations, it was much better that he bowed out as he did.

The Babe can get along very well without a manager's salary and still have the respect and admiration of baseball fans everywhere. As field marshal of a loser, he shortly would hear the Bronx cheer as did lovable Walter Johnson and other immortals.

Ruth considers the Yankees of 1926, '27, and '28, the finest team he ever played with or saw. It had as its murderers' row the Bam himself, Lou Gehrig, and Long Bob Meusel, with the resourceful Tony Lazzeri at second base, Jumping Joe Dugan at third, the graceful Earl Combs in center, and a pitching staff headed by the highly intelligent southpaw, Herb Pennock.

PENNOCK SMARTEST

"I didn't see the Boston Red Sox of 1912, Speaker says that was the strongest outfit he ever was with or set eyes on," asserts Ruth, here for a winter of sunshine with other greybeards on the green benches that line the sidewalks of this resort city.

Ruth played with three fair to middling Red Sox arrays himself. The 1915 Boston out-fit for which he pitched included Speaker, Harry Hooper, and Duffy Lewis, Jack Barry, Bill Carrigan, Del Gainer, Larry Gardner, Dick Hoblitzel, Harold Janvrin, Mike McNally, and Everett Scott, and had as pitchers, Hugh Bedient, George Foster, Dutch Leonard, Ernie Shore, and Carl Mays.

RATES PENNOCK

Ruth rates Pennock as the smartest pitcher with whom he ever came in contact. He deplores the shortness of the baseball life of Bob Meusel, who lost his grip when the Yankees let him go to Cincinnati.

What kind of a manager would Ruth make? Well, anyone who played the game as long and well as he did should succeed in that capacity.

Ruth was popular with his fellow players and didn't make another mistake in baseball after his first. The Sultan of Swat laughs about his first and only blunder.

RUTH'S ONLY MISTAKE

"Ben Egan was my first catcher in organized ball in Baltimore," smiles Ruth.

"A goxerful hitter came to the plate in my early days with the Orioles. Ben ankled out to the box, told me to pitch carefully, and not to give the batter a good ball.

"Make the first one a waste ball,' said Ben.

"I threw a ball waist high over the plate and the batter smacked it for a triple.

"'Why didn't you do what I told you?' asked Ben.

"'I did,' I replied. 'It was just waist high.'"

But George Herman Ruth is out of it all now with his memories and 76 records.

GRANDEST RECORD

The Babe hit more home runs than any other player, and the most home runs in a season. He scored the most runs in a season, and batted in the most runs. He made 200 or more hits in three seasons. He drew the most bases on balls.

Ruth played in the most world series. He compiled the highest world series batting average. He batted in more runs than any other player in world series competition, and made the most home runs. He twice hit three home runs in a single world series game. He leads world series sluggers, and pitched the most consecutive scoreless innings.

JUNIOR CLUBS IN IMPORTANT GAME TONIGHT

Important to both teams, tonight's junior hockey clash at the Arena may prove to be a bitter affair when Edmonton Athletic Club meets Safeway-Canadians.

The two points, gained by virtue of a triumph, would greatly help either team in sticking right with the league-leading South Side A's as the teams near the back stretch in the schedule.

Trailing by only three points, a win for Edmonton A. C's would again place them right up with the leaders, while should Canadians stop the triumph they will be on even terms with the second place E. A. C's.

Both clubs have been showing good improvement in their play, making sturdy bids for points, and they should again be fighting for victory on even terms.

OLYMPICS BEAT BUFFALO BISONS

DETROIT, Jan. 15. — Detroit's Olympics came from behind last night to beat Buffalo Bisons 4-2 in overtime and stay at the top of the International Hockey League's western division.

With the score tied at two-all going into the extra period, Johnnie Sherf, with help from Alex Wood, Bison goalie, scored his second goal which broke the tie. Wilf Starr added a goal in the final minute of the overtime just for good measure, also his second of the night. Teasdale and Cliff Barton scored for the losers.

Coronation Beats Veteran, 7 - 5

VETERAN, Jan. 15.—In a scheduled Hi Way 12 League fixture Coronation took the local boys to the tune of 7-5 in a wide open, free scoring, hard fought game, played in a near blizzard Friday night, Jan. 10. Len. Cuthbert, Scots ace Cook did the sharp-shooting for Coronation, while Lang, Bennett and B. Olesen, L. Olesen did the scoring for Veteran.

LINEUPS:

Coronation—Hazelwood, Townsend, Scott, Malo, Lee N. Cuthbert, Cook, D. Cuthbert, Law, G. Cuthbert.

Veteran—Melin, Nelson, Dinny, Bibby, B. Olesen, Lang, Bennett, Labarge, L. Olesen, Westrom.

Referee—Doc Ballantyne.

Ruth saved baseball and took it far beyond the wildest dreams of its owners. Yet they couldn't find a place for him when his spindly legs would no longer carry his massive body.

THE END

Great Crowd Sees Toronto Six Lose Thrilling Contest

Goalie Tiny Thompson is Credited With Assist as Boston Squad Triumphs Over Leafs by Margin of 4-1

BOSTON, Jan. 15—Boston Bruins, cheered on by a capacity crowd of 16,125, the first such outpouring of the season, quit the National League cellar by drubbing the Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1, Tuesday night at the Boston Garden.

The victory, the first they have registered over the speedy Leafs this season, put the Bruins into third place, a half-game in front of the idle Chicago Black Hawks.

Little Cooney Weiland put Bruins out in front by caging Peggy O'Neil's neat pass out. The second tally coming when Dit Clapper hooked the puck away from big Charlie Conacher and scored.

Leafs put on a mighty five-man drive that ended with Buzz Boll caging the passout Bill Thoms fired from the rear of the Boston net. The trailing visitors made several desperate scoring attempts during the finale, only to have goalie Tiny Thompson and Eddie Shore fire long passes that enabled Babe Siebert to break from centre-ice, outskate the Toronto pack and score twice during the last three minutes of play.

Thompson was credited with an assist on Siebert's first goal. He passed out to the defenceman who was unguarded near the blue line and had only to skate to the Toronto goal to score. Thompson also started the play for the fourth Bruin goal, passing to Eddie Shore who relayed the puck to Siebert, but the official scorer credited only Shore with an assist.

WEAKENED RANGERS BEAT MAROONS

MONTREAL, Jan. 15.—New York Rangers sped to a 2-1 victory over Montreal Maroons in a National Hockey League game last night with a patched up line-up made necessary by the absence of Bun Cook, Vernon Ayres and Harold Starr.

After announcing Bill Cook would be moved back on defence, Manager Lester Patrick was forced to use the veteran as centre for the third line when Bun Cook developed a touch of rheumatic fever.

Earl Robinson gave the Maroons a first period lead when he drilled the puck past Dave Kerr after taking a pass from Dave Trottier.

Before the half-way mark in the third session Butch Keeling tied the score on a neat play with Boucher and Glen Brydson that saw them pass the puck around to furnish the opening after halting a Maroon rush inside the blue line. Dillon scored the game-winning goal little more than three minutes later.

CANUCKS MOVE UP BY VICTORY

NEW YORK, Jan. 15—A puck that bounced off Roy Worters' shin pads and rolled into the goal last night gave Montreal Canadiens a 1-0 victory over New York Americans in a National hockey league game played before 8,000 in Madison Square Garden.

The victory sent the Flying Frenchmen into third place in the Canadian section of the league and shot the Americans down into the cellar.

Sixteen minutes and 42 seconds of quiet play had gone by in the first period when the colorful Aurel Pusie picked up a loose puck near the blue line and passed to Pit Lepine. The centre fed the puck to Aurel Joliat who was crossing in front of the goal and that player snapped it toward the net.

Worters slid his leg to the right to stop the disc but it dropped to the ice, with still a trace of momentum and rolled slowly into the net while Worters, his legs spread wide, tried vainly to stop it with his hands.

Hillas Electric Draws With Civic Youths In Other End

STANDINGS

Clubs—	W	L	D	Pts
Saskatoon Welders	6	4	2	14
St. Albert	6	4	2	13
Hillas Electric	4	4	2	11
Bush Miners	3	5	2	8
Civic Youths	3	5	2	8

By JACK ERASKIN

Bob Cramer's Saskatoon Welder huskies, by trouncing Bush Mine 6-1, recaptured leadership of the Commercial Hockey League last night. Also at the Arena yesterday eve Hillas Electric and Civic Youths bettered their standing by one point each when they came out of their hockey huddle with a 2-2 deadlock in the second end of the double-header.

Welders, just one point behind St. Albert at the start of their game with Bush Mine, took full advantage of St. Albert's idleness in the schedule, as they capitalized in this "break" for a decisive victory.

WON IN FIRST

The Cramer crew went out to clinch their victory in the first period, making a 4-1 score look large against the upstart Bush Mine power; were hailed in a scoreless second session, and chalked up a brace in the third period for good measure as Miners were again checked to 10 tallies.

Caldwell, on a pass slung over by Haig, registered the first Welder goal, but Grant made it two for that club as Colville did the sniffing honors. Bush Mine sandwiched in their lone tally of the evening as lines scored—Esdale's pass, but saw Welders step out for a brace more as Horne went a-scoring on both of them. Horne was assisted by Caldwell on the first and Stewart on the second.

SCORELESS SECOND

Goalies made it "no dice" for both teams in a scoreless second session with both clubs playing a good brand of hockey.

However, the steady goal sniping of the Welders could not be checked in the final go, with Stewart and Caldwell getting one each between the pipes. Stewart's goal was on an assist from Horne, while Caldwell scored in for his.

Civic Youths and Hillas found it tougher sledding as goals were more evenly divided in their set-to.

After a scoreless first period, both clubs rifled the riggings for one apiece in the second, and repeated their performance in the third.

YOUTHS STARTED IT

The Youths started as Gauff registered on a lone effort, but the Electricians were just good enough to match that goal before the session ended. McMillan tallied on Walker's timely pass.

Again Youths went ahead in the third as Gerlitz from Jones formed a scoring combination, but McMillan, this time on Graham's pass, once more snatched victory from the Youths' grasp late in the frame. No overtime was played.

Tiny Thompson Gives Unique Hockey Display

Goaltender of Bruins is Credited with Assist Against Toronto

BOSTON, Jan. 15—Cecil (Tiny) Thompson, Boston Bruin goaltender, helped his team score two goals last night as the Bruins defeated Toronto Maple Leafs, 4-1, but the official scorer finally decided to give the veteran only one assist.

In the third period, with the Leafs trying desperately to overcome a 2-1 deficit, Thompson stopped a shot and passed out to Babe Siebert, defenceman, who raced away from the attacking force and scored easily.

Thompson duplicated the feat before the game ended, passing to Eddie Shore, who relayed the puck to Siebert. The Babe scored again, but the official scorer changed his mind after awarding Thompson his second assist. He decided only Shore should be credited with an assist.

HUDSON BAYS, CARDINALS IN TIE WITH WIN

Beat R.C.M.P., W.W. Sales In Independent League Games Last Night

The Independent League double fixture last night at Varsity rink, failed to break the first place deadlock between Cardinals and Hudson Bay, as these two teams each won their games against W. W. Sales and R.C.M.P. respectively, by scores of 5-4 and 4-3.

The first encounter was the best of the night, when Hudson's Bay barely nosed out a 5-4 victory over the R.C.M.P. squad. The game was close and fast and the verdict might have easily been reversed, exemplifying the old story of a great game to win and a hard one to lose. Canty was high scorer for the Bay with three counters, while Lucid topped the cop crew with two.

The game between Cardinals and W. W. Sales was not as fast as the first one, the play being quite ragged in places, but the latter checking closely. Cardinals showed a little more finish on their plays, but their set form settled them not till late in the third, when Acroyd sped down the ice on a solo and registered the winning tally.

LINEUPS:

Hudson's Bay: J. Smith, M. Graham, J. Thir, W. Longmuir, D. Canty, D. Donald, MacBie, L. Reuter, G. McDonald (Capt.).

The designer of more than 200 courses said Tuesday he believed links planners have made the professionals' game easier while the duffers' woes for the ordinary player.

"Look at the scores those pros are shooting. Fifty-evil one I'm right," said the white-haired architect. "We've been putting in hazards, bunkers, waterholes and dog-legs, where the money players just don't play. But when the duffer starts touring he stumbles from one mean pitfall to another."

Myrnam Defeats Derwent Sextet

MYRNAM, Jan. 15—Myrnam and Beauvallon fought through 65 minutes of fast, clean hockey to a 1-1 tie last Sunday on Beauvallon's ice.

Rod Hiltz for Beauvallon scored the opening goal in the first period and P. Dmytryshyn for Myrnam tied the score in the second period.

Myrnam was crippled throughout the game by lack of subs. In spite of that they made some snappy runs.

Myrnam took a firm hold of a 3-1 lead over Derwent during the first three periods, when a hockey game played here recently. The local hockey fans were presented the best game of the season.

A sudden five-man attack from the faceoff at the start of the last period, resulted in Derwent's goal. Myrnam was disorganized for the greater portion of that period.

The score was tied for two seconds before the final goal, when Bill Philipovich made an individual rush and hacked behind his fourth and winning goal a second before the sound of the final bell.

PHILLY FEARS RANGERS WILL DRAFT STARS

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15—This sedate Quaker city, really hockey conscious for the first time in its history, cocked an apprehensive eyebrow toward New York's Madison Square Garden today.

Reports of the drastic shakeup in the lineup of the ageing National league Rangers has increased fears Manager Lester Patrick may soon decide to recall some of his starry farmhands with the local Ramblers of the Canadian-American circuit.

Definitely slated for the big time at some future date is the "flashy, high-powered kid-line of Neil and Mac Colville, Edmonton, and Alex Shibicky, of Winnipeg.

An outstanding defence prospect for the New York Blueshirts is Joe "Palooka" Cooper of Winnipeg.

Other promising young forwards with the Can.-Am. league leaders are Bobby Kirk, of Vancouver, and Sammy McManus and Watson of Montreal.

BOXING DUKES INVESTIGATING RING CHARGES

Editor Claims Employee of N.Y. Commission Aids Gamblers

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Jan. 15.—The New York State Athletic Commission Tuesday launched an investigation into charges a member of its staff openly connived with the gambling element in New York fight clubs.

Nat Fleischer, editor of "The Ring", a boxing magazine, appeared before the commission to repeat charges made in a broadcast last week.

He said an investigation, made at the request of fight fans, revealed one of the commissioner's inspectors placed bets with gamblers after ascertaining how the commission's judges were scoring the fights.

Fleischer promised to be on hand Friday with his witnesses at which time the inspector in question will be called before the boxing moguls.

Fleischer explained his address which flayed the commission for "inefficiency and inconsistency" and suggested an official investigation. He said his blast was not aimed at the individual honesty of the commissioners, but at its general inefficiency and flagrant favoritism, brought to a head last week by its refusal to license Hank Bath of California to fight Ed Burman.

COLONELS WHIP PONOKA BY 5-2

WEMBLEY STARS DEFEAT YANKEES

LONDON, Jan. 15—Wembley All-Stars defeated the United States Olympic hockey team 10-5 before a crowd of 6,000 at the Wembley stadium last night.

The Americans were out-skated and their teamwork looked poor in comparison with the All-Stars, on which are some former Canadian players. A red last-period rally in which the visitors tallied four times failed to avert defeat.

For All-Stars Jimmy Haggarty, former Port Arthur Bear Cats player and member of Canada's Olympic team; Alex Archer and Milford scored two each, while the LeMay brothers from Winnipeg, Tony and Albert Smith and Murphy each scored once.

The American scorers were Shaughnessy, former Queenstown, two; Lax, Spain and Stubbs.

RIALTO STAGE ATTRACTIONS ON TOMORROW

Vaudeville to Share Limelight With Picture Presentation

Glittering stage attractions are to be added to the regular screen fare at the Rialto theatre starting Thursday, when the combined Ches Lamberton - Al Oliver bands backed by a bevy of dancing damsels will present a snappy forty-minute Rhumba Revue.

This is the first of the Rialto stage attraction units, to be changed each three days with the picture and presenting double-fare stage and screen entertainment.

Manager W. J. Long announces that the stage attractions will reflect the cream of the crop of all available semi-professional and professional talent. New staging, faces and numbers will be seen semi-weekly and the lure of the footlights will again brighten up each performance.

The Rhumba Revue has a cast of twenty people and in staging and novelty will be bright, breezy and attractive. The big orchestra will weave an harmonious background for the dancing chorus and the individual performers, the whole blending into a fast-moving, lilting and peppy show.

Twice-a-day this stage show will be presented and the semi-weekly change of bill and picture attractions should make the Rialto a twice-a-week habit with patrons.

Hollywood Gossip

INTIMATE GLIMPSES AND INSIDE STUFF ON THE MOVIE COLONY

By DAN THOMAS

MISS LOY, who had sneezed off a section of eyelash on the chilly sound stage, came off the set for repairs, and to grin at my question about how she was getting along as the enigma-woman of the screen.

From the days of her oriental masquerades, she always has been amused by attempts to cloak her in mystery. The freckle-faced Montana girl is no more mysterious, of course, than your Cousin Kate.

The fact that she isn't seen about very much is due to a simple dislike of big parties and an inclination to yawn in night clubs. She cherishes a few close friends, about half of whom have nothing to do with the movies. Her behavior in public is so discreet that scandal-diggers can do no more than hint her affection for a man who has not yet obtained his divorce.

She answers questions with unvarying good nature, but in a sort of self-deprecating way that provides little nourishment for newshounds. She doesn't believe movie fans care a whoop about what she has for breakfast. She refuses to adopt silly eccentricities which would get her a lot of publicity.

She smilingly declines to toss temperamental tantrums; only gets angry about once a year, then does such a thorough job of it that she makes herself ill. She hopes she won't be "typed" as a wife for the remainder of her career.

LASTING IMPRESSIONS

Things you'll remember after meeting them: Joan Crawford's year-around sun-tan. Freddie Bartholomew's correct English diction. Robert Montgomery's quizzical smile. Spencer Tracy's crushing handshake, and the powerful charm of Gladys Swarthout, whose hands are strong from golf and riding.

SAAR FETES PLEBISCITE ANNIVERSARY

Warning by Germany Coupled With Expressions Of Good-Will

By EDMOND HUNZBUCHLER

Copyright 1936, by Havas News Agency

SAARBRUECKEN, Jan. 15. — A warning Germany cannot be coerced by foreign military might was coupled with expressions of goodwill to France and Great Britain by the Nazi government Monday as the Saarland triumphantly celebrated the first anniversary of the plebiscite which returned the territory to the Reich.

Speaking before a huge throng massed in historic Wartburg castle, Reich commissioner for the Saar, Joseph Buerkel, declared, "We do not wish that France be troubled by any internal disorders or that Great Britain be shaken by revolt.

"But neither will we permit such troubles to be carried within our borders by tanks and cannon," the commissioner declared as storms of applause from a huge audience re-echoed through the castle.

Mundare Buys New Fire Hall

MUNDARE, Jan. 15.—The village of Mundare, after a lengthy dispute, have purchased a brick building, formerly a garage and owned by Peter Horyn, which is to be immediately converted into a fire hall to replace the one burned down.

Strong recommendation of one of the councillors to build a frame building was defeated, and the fireproof building bought. This building, which is across the street from the old fire hall, acted as an excellent fire check during the burning of the old hall.

Parish Enjoys Venison Dinner

CAMROSE, Jan. 15.—"For he's a jolly good hunter" rang through the St. Frances-Xavier parish hall here Monday evening as parishioners thanked Father P. F. Harrington for the bountiful venison dinner at which 175 were served by ladies of the Catholic Women's League. Moose, deer and elk meat, gift of the genial pastor to his flock, was served. Charles Duggan and Dennis Twomey thanked Father Harrington for the hospitality, and Andrew Doucette suggested the songparody of napoleonic execution. Carols followed the dinner.

Montreal Theatre Owners Are Sued

MONTREAL, Jan. 15.—Posters of scantily-garbed chorus girls advertising the Ziegfeld Follies, displayed in the lobby of His Majesty's theatre during showing of a film about the Pope entitled "The Shepherd of the Seven Hills," was cited by the film's exhibitor in court Tuesday as one ground of claim for $1,733 damages from the theatre owners.

Suit was entered by Leo J. Lapensee, exhibitor of the religious film. He claimed the poster display of some 30 girls in a "semi-nude state" had the effect of making those who came to see his film believe they were in the wrong theatre. As result he alleged the box-office suffered a loss.

May Change Mind

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 15—Douglas Fairbanks intimated Tuesday he may have been premature in the recent announcement that he had retired permanently as an actor. His next picture, dealing with Marco Polo, may find him playing the title role, he said yesterday.

AMUSEMENTS

CAPITOL

A love story so magnificent and compelling that the audience sat hushed for a full minute after the final fadeout before breaking out into tumultuous applause unfolded on the screen at the Capitol theatre last evening. The film was "The Dark Angel," produced by the latest production for release through United Artists, and the chief actors in the powerful and gripping romantic drama were Fredric March, Merle Oberon and Herbert Marshall. None has ever been cast to better advantage.

Merle, delightful in her widely publicized new personality, shorn of the exoticism and mystery of her former roles, plays Kitty Vane, a sweet, young English girl, who since childhood has been loved by one boy, Gerald (Marshall), while she loves his cousin, Alan (March). Months in the trenches bring to Alan a realization of his love for Kitty. Home on leave, he confesses his love but their ecstatic plans to marry on the morrow are shattered by a sudden order cancelling all leaves. They swear the marriage vows to each other and next morning Alan returns to the trenches.

Alan is reported killed, and the story proceeds to a powerful emotional climax and ends on a beautiful, heart-gripping note.

Magnificently acted, handsomely mounted and brilliantly directed, "The Dark Angel," which Lillian Hellman and Mordaunt Shairp adapted from a play by Guy Bolton, stands out as one of the finest and most entertaining films in many a cinema season.

STRAND

The hitherto little-known workings of the United States Border Patrol are revealed in "Red Salute," the rollicking Reliance romantic comedy starring Barbara Stanwyck, with Robert Young opposite, which began a 3 day run at the Strand theatre today.

This branch of the federal service comes into play when a pretty but prominent American co-ed and a young buck private find themselves stranded across the Mexican border and make a wild break for the United States and home, with cupid doing the backseat driving and Uncle Sam trailing.

"Red Salute" is an original story by Humphrey Pearson. The screen play was prepared by the author in collaboration with Menuel Seff.

Hardie Albright, Ruth Donnelly, Cliff Edwards, Gordon Jones, Paul Stanton and Purnell Pratt are also prominently cast in this Edward Small production, presented by Harry M. Goetz. Sidney Lanfield directed the comedy for release through United Artists.

RED DEER, Jan. 15.—Results have been announced by the Red Deer Rod and Gun Association of their annual competition for schools in the Municipal District of Pine Lake. Points were awarded for feet and eggs of crows and magpies and the standing of the first five schools were: Clearview, 14,286; Valley Centre, 13,250; Willowdale, 12,706; Howell's Lake, 9,606; Grassy Lake, 9,116. Mikey Olynyk of Clearview was largely responsible for his school winning first place as he found in 2,059 eggs and 328 feet. The school was awarded a shield from the Fish and Game Association.

The Association reports a record year in crow extermination. Eggs to the number of 25,000 and 8,689 feet of crows and magpies were turned in during the competition and over $295 was paid out in prize awards.

RIGID QUALIFICATIONS LAID DOWN FOR CITY TEACHERS

Instructors Must Show Improvement To Hold Down Job

Medical Certificates to Accompany Requests For Pay on Sick Leave From Schools.

Teachers who apply for positions on the academic staff of Edmonton's public schools must possess at least a first class professional certificate, have had three years' teaching experience and have received three school inspectors' reports of "very good" or "excellent," the board of trustees decided Tuesday night.

Another resolution which was placed on the board's records declared that second-class certificate teachers who have been appointed to the staff since the beginning of the 1935-36 term be given four years as from January 1, 1936, to obtain minimum qualifications of a first class certificate or show other evidence of qualifying in specialized subjects if they wish to continue in the service of the board.

DR. CRANG OPPOSES

The first resolution was emphatically opposed by Trustee S. A. G. Barnes who argued that academic ability should not be given a paramount place as it did not necessarily indicate teaching ability. Experience did not mean ability either, he said.

Dr. F. W. Crang, trustee, was against the first class qualification for applicants, feeling that many were unable to continue at school long enough to get this standing but could attain it after they were employed. A. E. Ottewell, chairman, said it was only a matter of about a year before students would not be allowed to enter high school without first class or grade 12 standing.

Mr. Barnes hammered at the "inspectors' reports" qualification. "Inspectors make mistakes," he said.

"Yes, and so do members of the board," Mr. Ottewell said with a slight show of impatience.

"Yes, sir, I'll admit that," Mr. Barnes replied.

SICK LEAVES

Both the motions were moved by Trustee Dr. W. Morrish, the resolution regarding present employees having been placed on the order paper by Trustee S. G. Dowcott, who was absent. Mr. Morrish explained that Trustee Bowcott had spoken at some length on the proposal which was to prevent teachers, once employed, from "vegetating."

Resolution of Trustee Casselman calling for medical certificates in case of teachers applying for sick leave with pay was passed.

Intensive activity was shown in the annual report of the school board's medical department, received at the meeting. During 1935 there were 10,361 pupils given medical examinations, while 2,794 were given complete physical examination.

VARIOUS DEFECTS

The medical inspections disclosed 2,697 pupils having various defects, mostly of minor nature, while in the complete physical tests just over half of them, 1,440, were given clear bills of health.

An outstanding item of infantile paralysis was noted in the report with the administration of 48 inoculations for the disease. There were 183 inoculations for diphtheria and the schools paraded another year without a single case of this disease, the only case in the last five years being one in 1931.

Dental work was extensive, 10,183 operations being performed, with 1,400 cases being completed.

The monthly report on attendance showed total enrolment for December as 15,597, slightly lower than that in the same month of 1934, which was 15,667.

$10,000 FOR NEW GYMS IS RECOMMENDED

Physical Education in High Schools Hampered, G. A. McKee States

Suggestion that three temporary gymnasiums be erected for high school physical training was made by Supt. G. A. McKee in a report on physical education submitted to the Edmonton Public School board at a meeting Tuesday night. Such buildings, to be a temporary accommodation for this work, would cost $10,000, it was stated. The report was tabled until the next meeting.

Mr. McKee stated that the present outlined course in physical education was quite feasible in the public schools and was being carried out with fair success at present. The high school work was falling down for lack of halls in which to hold classes, he said.

MIGHT BE HELPED

He felt the situation might be helped by temporary buildings placed at Eastwood, Strathcona and Westmount. These would each serve several schools in the area.

Edmonton's "regulation strap", as recommended by a management committee meeting Monday night, was authorized by the board. It will come in two sizes, for the lower grades and the higher grades, and will conform to the regulation of being such as "could be used by a "kind, firm and judicious parent."

In a concluding paragraph in his report, Supt. McKee states: "The use of the strap may be unavoidable at times and there is no use in getting sentimental over it, but the better teachers are very sparing in its use."

Suggested appropriation of $2 000 for school library purposes was referred to the budget committee.

The board gave its sanction to a tournament for school pupils to be staged by the Edmonton Amateur Boxing and Wrestling Association.

IMPAIRS MORAL SENSE

But the chief consideration in the entire question is that the law of God is being broken. The necessity for a day of rest with an opportunity for worship, is written into the very constitution of mankind, and this necessity is met in the Divine plan. To make light of this Divine provision is to impair the moral sense of our people and to set at naught the law of God.

We, the Ministers of the Churches, therefore call upon those who value the higher interests of the community to exert all their influence in upholding the integrity of this Canadian law in obedience to the will of God. We call upon you to be ready to make such sacrifices for the preservation of the highest things. We summon you that, by precept and example, you should lead the youth into paths which bring to our nation not sorrow but blessing. And, finally, we call upon all constituted authorities to discharge their obligations to the maintenance of this law of the land.

Signed in behalf of the denominational representatives in the Federation of Churches:

A. E. Burgett, Anglican Bishop of Edmonton;
Charles G. Stone, representative of the Baptist Churches;
A. R. Osborne, Moderator of the Presbyterian Churches of Edmonton;
S. H. Irving, chairman of the Presbytery of Edmonton United Churches;
O. E. Black, president of the General Ministerial Association.

Some 4,600,000 postcards and stamped envelopes are sold by American postoffices annually.

PROTEST SPORT FOR GAIN ON SABBATH DAY

Government Urged to Enforce Strictly Lord's Day Act

Protesting against the commercialization of Sunday sport in Edmonton, and pointing out that not only was the law of God being broken in this respect but that the law of the land was also being disregarded, prominent churchmen representing the Federation of Churches met Premier Aberhart, Attorney General Hugill and other members of the cabinet on Tuesday afternoon and lodged a formal protest.

The petition presented to the government was read by Bishop A. E. Burgett, Anglican Bishop of Edmonton, as chairman, and was spoken to by all the members of the delegation. It was taken under advisement by the cabinet.

The following is the text of the petition presented:

SAY LAW BROKEN

"The citizens of Edmonton are asked to consider seriously the necessity of taking a firm stand against influences calculated to rob them of a day of rest and worship.

"Attention is particularly directed to the efforts which are being made by some, careless of the real issues involved, to commercialize Sunday sport and entertainment. The ministers of the city wish to call attention to the fact that the commercializing of sport as carried on in properties owned or controlled by the city, and therefore under the authority of the council, is a violation of the law of the land.

"The Lord's Day Act of Canada declares that the charging of a fee directly or indirectly at such organized games or entertainments is illegal. Therefore, the holding of games or entertainments where the soliciting of money at the entrance is practiced is an evasion of the real intent of the act.

"There are not many things more necessary in the present day for a people than a high regard for the sanctity of their laws, and it is surely a serious matter that this law, placed upon the statute books by our forefathers, who had the welfare of Canada so close to their hearts, should be thoughtlessly violated by any of our people.

In the second place, it is evident that the Christian Sunday which has hitherto been observed is the inestimable benefit of the Canadian people is in grave danger of being broken down by influences which are alien to our traditions.

IMPAIRS MORAL SENSE

But the chief consideration in the entire question is that the law of God is being broken. The necessity for a day of rest with an opportunity for worship, is written into the very constitution of mankind, and this necessity is met in the Divine plan. To make light of this Divine provision is to impair the moral sense of our people and to set at naught the law of God.

We, the Ministers of the Churches, therefore call upon those who value the higher interests of the community to exert all their influence in upholding the integrity of this Canadian law in obedience to the will of God. We call upon you to be ready to make such sacrifices for the preservation of the highest things. We summon you that, by precept and example, you should lead the youth into paths which bring to our nation not sorrow but blessing. And, finally, we call upon all constituted authorities to discharge their obligations to the maintenance of this law of the land.

Signed in behalf of the denominational representatives in the Federation of Churches:

A. E. Burgett, Anglican Bishop of Edmonton;
Charles G. Stone, representative of the Baptist Churches;
A. R. Osborne, Moderator of the Presbyterian Churches of Edmonton;
S. H. Irving, chairman of the Presbytery of Edmonton United Churches;
O. E. Black, president of the General Ministerial Association.

ROAD EXPERT TO SEE GOVERNMENT ABOUT HIGHWAYS

Prepared to interview the provincial government's department of public works officials, the Chamber of Commerce, the Alberta Motor association and kindred automobile clubs, A. A. Knight, executive of Brunner-Mond, Canada, Limited, arrived in the city from the East Monday morning.

Brunner-Mond, Canada, Limited, manufactures road surfacing materials and it is to interest powers in Alberta in his firm's preparation of a chemical mixture, preserving the life of dirt highways, that Mr. Knight is making his Edmonton visit.

The chemical mixture of calcium chloride is a component part, acts as a binder to the gravel, prevents the rain from washing away all the shoulders of the road, withstanding the terrific pounding of big trucks and preserving it from the wear and tear of weather, said Mr. Knight.

Ontario and many of the state highway systems in the United States are utilizing this life preserver for gravel-surfaced highways and Mr. Knight desires to interest the provincial government in the surfacing of trunk highways in Alberta with the chemical gravel-binder.

THE INQUIRING REPORTER

Deep thought has been given by public school children to the question of a "regulation strap" for administering corporal punishment in city schools.

How long? How wide? How thick! Lissome or stiff? Light or heavy? These are a few of the points which have been considered in trying to arrive at the right instrument for a deterrent from mischief.

What is your idea?

A few ideas are given here:

AUBREY DEPROSE, order desk clerk: "The lightest strap was always the most suitable as far as I was concerned, but I haven't thought much about it for a few years."

MISS OLIVE REEVES, office worker and ex-teacher: "It all depends at which end of the strap you are standing. As a disher-out I found that the bigger they were the better. They should frighten but not necessarily hurt."

• • •

BERT KENNEDY, margin clerk: "I'm not interested in straps. By the time I have kids big enough to need strapping I will likely be done by electric rays."

• • •

CLARENCE GREW, young family man: "I suppose it should be an inch and a half to two inches wide, so its edges won't cut, if it has to be used at all. And there are times when it is necessary, I believe."

• • •

BUD BIRD, high school student: "It should be a small one. It's not the size that counts but the pressure the teacher puts on it. I'd say the smaller the better."

• • •

G. H. CLARK, teacher: "You should have ideas on that yourself, if I remember events of a few years ago." (This interview stopped quickly.)

• • •

MAVIS, age 13: "I don't think there should be one at all. Once I got the strap every day for a week, so you can imagine what I think of it."

Police Court

Ernest Germanier and Frank Schoban, who were arrested Tuesday night by city and R.C.M.P. detectives on counterfeiting charges, were given an adjournment for a week. Germanier was charged with possession of counterfeit bank notes and Schoban with using counterfeit bank notes, the latter pleading not guilty.

• • •

Convicted of breach of the Factory Act in permitting employees to work more than nine hours a day and violating the minimum wage section of the Act, William Dolynyk was fined $25 and costs and ordered to pay a total of $75 as wages owed two employees who were complainants.

RECEIVER FOR BEVERLY IS UNNECESSARY

Ex-Mayor Says Affairs Affected by Wasteful Coal Operations

That there can be no possible justification for placing the town of Beverly in the hands of an administrator, and that while trivial and misleading charges may be made for taking this step, the fact remains that as compared with other centres of the same population the affairs of Beverly are being administered most economically was the statement made Wednesday by Harold Gerry, ex-mayor of Beverly.

"I have been shocked by the information that the government is considering replacing the town council of Beverly by an administrator" said Mr. Gerry, referring to the meeting which is to be held Wednesday night in connection with this matter. "There is no need for it. If the facts are faced and if justice is done."

Ex-mayor Gerry alleges that the coal monopoly has entirely been wasted and that government assistance by way of intervention and legislation has created those who are responsible for the wasting.

OUTSIDERS BROUGHT IN

"To add insult to injury qualified miners resident in Beverly have been replaced by outside labor, and in all the controversy about relief in Beverly it appears to have escaped the attention of the government that the whole of Beverly's relief problem rests on the right to work of these men to work in local industry. That right is universally recognized elsewhere, and if recognized in Beverly the relief question would be a dead issue," he said.

Ex-Mayor Gerry also charged that the placing of the town in the hands of an administrator at this time would militate against the town of Beverly in a pending court action against the company now operating the mine.

GOVERNMENT ON TRIAL

"It is not the people of Beverly but the Social Credit government which is itself on trial," he said. "If the government implements the inquitous Bill 64 by dismembering the Municipal Act by placing an administrator in Beverly and thereby jeopardizing the financial stability of the town, the government will be on trial before the people of Alberta and the country at large."

SUCCESS ATTENDS MEMBER DRIVE

The Edmonton Chamber of Commerce membership drive is meeting with great success, John Blue, manager secretary of the chamber, reports. The real estate membership has been doubled as a result of the drive and 55 new members have been brought into the association under the retail section.

All indications point to a much larger membership than last year. The drive will continue the remainder of this week and business men who intend joining and have not done so are urged to send in their cheques immediately in order to facilitate the work of the membership committee.

3 ARRESTS AS POLICE PROBE FORGERY RING

Raiding Squads Confiscate About $100 in Counterfeit Bills

Three arrests Tuesday night climaxed a long period of investigation on the part of city police and R.C.M.P. detectives into the activities of a forgery ring that is believed to be operating throughout the length and breadth of the province.

Squads headed by Inspector Robert Sutherland of the city police force and Sergeant H. Symons, R.C.M.P., arrested Ernest Germaine at his Edgewater rooms, 96 street, where about $100 in counterfeit $10 and $5 bills were found after a diligent search of the apartment. He was charged with possession of forged documents while Frank Schoban, also of 96 street, was charged with uttering forged documents, or passing the counterfeit bills. A third man is held as a material witness and his name was not announced.

Mounted police and city detectives have been working for some time since bogus bills have been detected in many parts of the province. It is believed that they are manufactured in a plant concealed in a rural part of Southern Alberta.

These bills first made their appearance in the city some months ago and recently several have been passed, one at a city restaurant on New Year's eve, while another cafe was victimized about the same time.

Detectives Frank Kingzett, Murdo Munro and Hugh Allen, of the city police, with Constables J. K. Small and Constable E. Lapointe, R. C. M. P., were members of the squad responsible for the arrests.

Canada Surged Forward In 1935

Sir John Aird, President, and Mr. S. H. Logan Address Annual Meeting of THE CANADIAN BANK OF COMMERCE

FOUNDATION OF BETTER ECONOMIC LIFE

Farm Purchasing Power Rose . . . Mining Made New Record . . . Lumber Production Greatest Since 1929 . . . News Print Reached Record Level

Mr. S. H. Logan, General Manager, in discussing the banking system and function of money, said in part:

The Canadian banks have already made substantial concessions in their lending rates but they are under constant pressure to cut these rates still further.

Interest Rates to Bank Borrowers.

As I have stated on several previous occasions, loan rates to bank borrowers must of necessity be governed by the cost to the banks of the money which they lend. A careful computation of expenses, such as our annual payroll for 5,000 employees, taxes, rentals, postage, telegraph and telephone, heat, light, stationery and other outlays, plus an allowance for annual losses which are inevitable in banking, shows that our aggregate costs are over 2% of total deposits. When we add to these costs the sum paid in interest to depositors, the money we administer costs us approximately 4%.

Purchasing Power.

We have become so accustomed in this modern world to using money for all our purchases that it is easy to fall into the belief that money is the true and only source of purchasing power and that when trade dwindles the sole cause is a shortage in or a maldistribution of the money supply. That is a fundamental error, for it remains equally true in 1936 as it was in the days of barter that the goods or services which a man has to offer are the real source of his purchasing power and the extent of that purchasing power is measured solely by the amount of the goods or services of others which he can obtain in exchange for his own.

The relation of demand to supply governs the money prices which buyers are willing to give and sellers to accept. These prices express the comparative values of the various goods and services offered.

A surplus or deficiency in the supply of money may affect comparative values in some degree but drastic upsets in these values which result in major alterations in the purchasing power of whole classes and populations are not due to changes in the money supply but arise from such causes as wars, crop failures, disproportionate expansion of industrial or constructional enterprise based upon long term borrowing, excessive tariffs restricting markets, and sudden alterations in tastes, habits and fashions.

"Credit Money."

In Canada substantially the greater part of the bank-money in existence consists of the obligations of the chartered banks which are represented by the amount of their notes in circulation and of the total deposits on their books. These bank-money obligations are not legal tender but are acknowledgments of debt given by the respective banks and their promise to pay that debt in legal tender whenever the holder or owner of an obligation asks that this be done. Bank-money—like legal tender—rests upon and is fully covered by assets owned by the various banks. It will thus be seen that the credit-out-of-thin-air theory is founded on a complete misconception of fact.

Bank-money is created by every payment which a chartered bank makes in its own notes and every deposit entered on its books, whether received over the counter or credited by the bank to someone who has been granted a loan or has sold securities to the bank. Conversely bank-money is extinguished when a bank redeems any of its outstanding obligations in legal tender, when it sells any of its security holdings for bank-money and when bank-money is used by a borrower as a payment on his loan.

I would impress upon you that the creation of bank-money is a totally different thing from the creation of wealth. The bank-money received by a borrower when granted a loan does not increase his wealth by one penny for it is fully offset by the debt he has incurred to the bank. It does, however, enable him to carry on his business and thus to contribute to the creation of new wealth by his enterprise and activity.

Basis of Credit.

It is against a pledge of his credit that a man applies for a bank loan and the banker grants the loan only if he estimates the borrower's credit to be adequate, and if he believes the borrower's character and integrity are such that he will not attempt to evade the debt.

A bank loan, therefore, is in essence an exchange of the borrower's credit, which is effective only where he is well known, for the credit of the bank in the form of bank-money, which is known and accepted everywhere.

I would call your attention particularly to the fact that bank-money obligations of the chartered banks do not maintain the value at which they are accepted nor do they circulate as readily as legal tender, by the authority of any specific statute or Government sanction. They retain a constant value and circulate freely solely as the result of the firm belief of Canadian citizens based on experience that their banks are honestly and efficiently administered and that the liquid assets of the banks exceed their liabilities by a margin sufficient to ensure that bank obligations will be honoured immediately on presentation. The record of Canadian banks since Confederation for redeeming their promises promptly has been so satisfactory that bank-money in this country is unhesitatingly accepted as readily as legal tender.

Public Confidence is the Base.

May I repeat that the power to create bank-money is based entirely on the confidence of the general public. Not one cent of bank-money can be forced into circulation or stay in existence for a moment without the willing consent and co-operation of each person into whose ownership it passes.

Bank's First Duty to Depositors.

I would emphasize a fact which cannot be stated too often: the paramount duty of every bank is to keep the deposits entrusted to it safe and available for withdrawal by their owners. All its other activities, including that of making loans, must be subordinated to that primary obligation. Most of the new monetary theories advocated as a cure for the depression ignore this fundamental principle which must govern all bank operations. There is no way in which a bank can disregard that principle and survive.

Fewer Loans Refused Than Loans Accepted at a Loss.

Some say the banks have delayed the return of prosperity by denying loans to would-be borrowers possessed of credit which warranted the accommodation. These critics claim also that bankers are not prepared to take risks. While I freely admit that in the difficult task of estimating the credit standing of a client, bankers—who are no more than human—have made errors, I flatly deny the general truth of these charges for I am convinced that the number of cases where any legitimate claim for a loan has been refused is far exceeded by the number of those where loans have been made to the banker's loss.

The banker has at all times a strong inducement—that of increased income—to keep his investments at the lowest point and his loans at the highest point commensurate with the safety of his depositors. That inducement is at present doubly powerful for he has a larger proportion of his funds in liquid investments—chiefly Government obligations—than ever before, while the average return on such investments is now lower than at any time within a generation.

Common Sense View of Bank Loans.

There are some critics who, observing that total deposits in Canada during 1928 when business was active were about 200 million dollars higher than at present, attribute the depression to this cause. They, therefore, advocate that the Bank of Canada issue 200 million dollars in new notes to restore what they believe to be the loss which has taken place in Canadian buying power. The significant fact they have overlooked is that retail prices, as measured by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, are almost twenty per cent. below those of seven years ago and the fall in wholesale prices is even greater. In consequence an amount 300 million dollars less than our present total of deposits will buy to-day the same quantity of goods that would have cost in 1928 the full amount then on deposit. It is evident that Canadians do not lack the money to buy but rather the will to use it.

A System Based on Long Experience.

May I say in conclusion that our present monetary system is an intricate machine built up gradually on the experience of many generations and adjusted from time to time to meet changing circumstances. Whatever its faults—and that it has faults no one will deny—it has over the past one hundred years financed and facilitated an increasing volume of production and trade of the most complex nature with the result that the general standard of living has shown a great advance.

I would ask you to bear these facts in mind when you study suggested monetary experiments, whose advocates promise that their adoption will mean a step toward the millenium. Before we discard the machinery which has served us in the past let us at least be sure that we are not grasping at a shadow and losing the substance.

Sir John Aird, the President, said in part:

Entering the fourth year of the business revival, we now have a fair prospect of a broader and more regular advance than has been enjoyed for some time.

Improvement in Heavy Trades.

The first half of 1935 was characterized by an irregularity in Canadian business, although there was a slight upward trend. From July, however, there was a forward surge, participated in by several industries that had remained severely depressed in the preceding years. Thus, business improvement was extended to the so-called heavy trades, including construction, which collectively bulk large in Canadian economy and in normal times employ a large working force. From the point of view of employment conditions alone we may regard the better record of these industries as one of the heartening events of the year, for it was mainly in this field that employment continued to rise last autumn, a season in which a downturn is usual. Moreover, it is this field upon which we must depend for the re-employment of many of those out of work, and it is highly encouraging to find that it promises to be more fruitful this year.

Farm Purchasing Power.

Of equal importance was the improvement in farm purchasing power during 1935 which was the most widespread in the past six years, notwithstanding the poorest crop results ever known in numerous sections of the West, although fortunately the drought area was considerably smaller than in 1934. There is still room for decided betterment in farm purchasing power, however, and we have the prospect of seeing it rise this year to a much more satisfactory level.

Mixed Farming.

Although, as is well known, we have lost (though, I think, not beyond our powers of reclamation) part of our overseas markets for agricultural products, we have not reduced our cultivated land area to any appreciable extent since 1929, but have diverted more of it to mixed farming, which has called for an improved agricultural practice. This change is particularly noticeable in the Prairie Provinces, where there has been a large increase in live stock holdings, coupled with a strong growth in dairying, despite recurring droughts. Accordingly, these Provinces stand to gain the most from the further extension of the American market for Canadian live stock resulting from the new American-Canadian trade treaty.

Mining and Forestry.

Widespread benefits have been derived from a gold production which has risen in value from less than 40 million dollars in 1929 to over 100 million dollars in 1935, exceeding the output I forecasted a few years ago. But mining in all its branches has been a great factor in pushing the margin of habitation northward. It has attracted thousands of newcomers to our shores and during the past few years has been the bright spot in the employment situation. Last year it had another record output valued at 308 million dollars, which represents only a small fraction of the purchasing power that, despite heavy taxation, it disseminated throughout the entire Dominion; and it furnished over a third of the tonnage carried by Canadian railways.

Under market conditions almost inconceivably unfavourable, our lumber and pulp and paper mills have during the past twelvemonth increased their production, in the case of lumber by about 20 per cent. over 1934 to the highest point since 1929, and in respect of newsprint by 6 per cent. to a record level.

A Broader National Economy.

Mining and forestry have also been instrumental in raising our export trade as a whole to the highest value since 1930, and in a quantitative sense to over 70 per cent. of normal. Apart from the splendid production record of the mining industry, it is highly important to note that with a remarkable transformation in the metallurgical and marketing branches of the industry much of its larger exports flowed in the form of fabricated metals to the twenty countries which took significant quantities in 1935, as compared with the crude materials which thirteen corresponding markets took in 1929. Both the lumber and newsprint industries also developed more extensive markets, for last year lumber was sold in impressive volume in thirty-five countries, in comparison with twenty-six in 1929, while nearly 20 per cent. of our newsprint was exported overseas, against about 12 per cent. six years ago. We have, therefore, a higher quality in some of our major exportable products and are no longer dependent upon one or a few markets for the bulk of them, and consequently are less subject to price dictation.

Conditions Abroad.

American industry has shown exceptional adaptability to the changed conditions imposed upon it by the depression and by statutory regulations of far-reaching character. The present business upturn is not only a continuation of that comparatively healthy movement to which I drew your attention a year ago, but is the most prolonged since 1928. There is a momentum in this general business revival which may carry the United States to higher ground, notwithstanding the uncertainties induced by the forthcoming Presidential election campaign. In fact, the most urgent question is not whether the process of American recovery can be hastened, but whether unhealthy stimulus through unwise use of the redundant capital and credit reserves which now exist can be avoided.

Britain True to Principles.

Surrounded by political and economic experiments of every type, Great Britain remains the foremost champion of the true principles of democracy, of sound economic practices and of the rights of oppressed and underprivileged people. Thus we have witnessed during the past year probably the most heartfelt demonstration of loyalty ever tendered in modern times to the reigning head of a nation, while public opinion sanely resisted Utopian devices for social reform and massed its great forces in the cause of peace—all these impressive developments occurring in the midst of a business revival which, though of changing character, rested upon a more stable foundation than that of any other country.

In Continental Europe a large part of the industrial machine has been geared to a feverish re-armament programme and is therefore dangerously dependent upon destructive elements. Notwithstanding an undercurrent of political tension and of financial strain there are some encouraging factors in the situation, notably, good harvests over most of the area and recently a semblance of stability in French economy.

A lull in Japanese industry early in 1935 was followed by a renewed advance in the autumn, but the pace of its progress seems definitely to have slowed.

State Intervention In Business.

The present era is in striking contrast with that of pre-war times. Then, it was the widespread belief that governments could best promote a sound economy by ensuring the security of human life and property, and by non-interference with private enterprise. A comparatively peaceful and steady progress was accompanied by a rising standard of living, not only because of the introduction of power machinery, but also because a smooth-working financial system had been built up through which trade was based upon quite stable exchange rates. Price levels in the major countries were kept closely related and capital for productive purposes flowed freely across frontiers.

Aftermath of the War.

In previous addresses I reminded you that the economic dislocations of the Great War and its aftermath were primarily responsible for the onset of the depression and that the resultant disequilibrium in domestic and international trade called for wise and courageous action on the part of governments, no less than by individuals. You are aware of the various expedients, under government tutelage, which have been undertaken as protective measures, ranging from a vast array of trade restrictions to price fixing, commodity destruction, monetary manipulation and elaborate programmes of non-productive public works. As a result of these policies there is now a rigidity in the economic system which might easily bring about a permanent subnormal standard of living throughout the world. The lesson from this would seem to be that natural forces should now be allowed freer play if the world is to recapture its former economic flexibility. So Governments might well decide to avoid further obstructive intervention in the spheres of commerce and finance and thus permit business enterprise to generate new productive and trading activities enuring to the common advantage of all classes of their communities.

Canada's Credit Maintained.

It is most gratifying to be able to record that throughout the long and trying period of the depression from which we now appear to be emerging, the Dominion and Provincial Governments and all the larger cities of Canada have maintained their credit through the strict fulfilment of all obligations to the holders of their respective securities whether payable in Canadian or external currencies.

Credit is an intangible thing and for that reason its importance is not adequately realized by many.

Canada Requires Increased Capital.

Its firm maintenance, however, is vital to all progressive communities and to none more than to Canada, where capital will be increasingly required for the development of our resources and the financing of our Governments.

Canada is still in the early stage of her potential development and for that development capital is indispensable. Only the most scrupulous maintenance of our credit will ensure the continued availability of that capital as required.

Need for Increased Settlement.

The addition of a million of suitable settlers of good racial stocks on the soil of Canada would give her the larger population necessary to support the present over-expanded transportation system, and would also go far to solve our relief problems. Many countries, some poor in natural resources, have more people to support than before the Great War, with less proportionate wealth and productive facilities, and the question may well be asked whether the vast amounts expended by these States for the maintenance of the unemployed—in one way by militarizing them—would not be more humanely spent in establishing the excess population in the five great settlement belts still available, namely, Canada, Australia, Africa, South America and Siberia.

Public Finance.

For many years this Bank has urged various constructive legislative and administrative measures for the consideration of our numerous governmental bodies. These ranged from legislative union of some of our Provinces and reduction in the number of municipalities, to economy in expenditures, in order to bring budgets into balance, and to taxation reform.

It is now quite generally agreed that continuous borrowing to cover deficits and to maintain social services on the present scale cannot go on indefinitely and therefore that the most rigid public economy and higher taxation must be faced. Intensive study should be given to the problem of establishing a broader and more equitable basis of taxation. In this connection I again advocate a nation-wide turnover tax as more likely than any other new form of levy to meet the need of a balanced Dominion budget.

Confidence the Key to Recovery.

In conclusion, I should like to stress that for the full measure of recovery for which the world is hoping the intangible factor of confidence is indispensable. As long as there exists uncertainty or distrust respecting such vital matters as world peace, stabilization of currencies, industrial relations, the attitude of Governments towards private business and good faith as to public contractual obligations, permanent improvement in world affairs is impossible. Without that confidence, which is the moral and hence the most powerful influence in business, and indeed in all relations between man and man and of nation with nation, both domestic and international economic conditions must remain unsatisfactory and disturbing. With it all things can be accomplished.

BROOMHALL

CHICAGO, Jan. 15—Very little if any improvement is noted in European crop conditions. It is generally believed crops are very susceptible to any sudden drop in temperatures owing to the recent mild weather and absence of adequate snow protection. New crops are growing well in India, but additional rainfall will be needed soon. Mailed advices state Peru has favored Chilean wheat by raising the duty against Argentine wheat by 50 per cent. The South African drought has done extensive damage to cattle breeders. In one district cattle are dying off at the rate of 500 a day.

The winter wheat acreage in France and Great Britain is reported to be smaller than a year ago.

GOLD AND SILVER

MONTREAL, Jan. 15—Bar gold in London up two cents at $34.98 in Canadian funds; 140s 9½d in British funds. The fixed Washington price amounted to $35.03 in Canadian.

LONDON, Jan. 15—Bar gold advanced ½ penny to 140s 9½d. (U.S. equivalent $34.93). Bar silver easy, 7-16 lower at 20 1-16d.

BANK MONEY AND CREDIT EXPLANATION

Canadian Bank of Commerce Executives Meet Attacks on Banks

TORONTO, Jan. 15.—An explanation of bank money and credit was the outstanding feature of the address of Mr. S. H. Logan, General Manager of The Canadian Bank of Commerce, before the shareholders at their annual meeting at noon Tuesday. After drawing attention to the main points in the balance sheet presented at that time, and pointing out that operating costs and interest paid to the depositors brought the cost of money to the bank up to 4 per cent. he indicated the unreasonableness of further reduction in lending rates, and then launched upon the main theme of his address.

The many attacks made of late upon the Canadian banks disclosed a confusion of ideas with regard to banks and their powers and he therefore proposed to tell his hearers a little about banking machinery and how it worked.

"We have become so accustomed," he said, "in this modern world to using money for all our purchases that it is easy to fall into the belief that money is the true and only source of purchasing power and that when trade dwindles the sole cause is a shortage in or a maldistribution of the money supply. That is a fundamental error, for it remains equally true in 1936 as it was in the days of barter, that the goods or services which a man has to offer are the real source of his purchasing power and the extent of that purchasing power is measured solely by the amount of the goods or services of others which he can obtain in exchange for his own."

MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE

Money was a medium of exchange for these goods and services, and also a store of value. The relation of demand to supply governed the money value of these goods and services, and the purchasing power of an individual rose and fell with the money value of the goods and services offered. A surplus or deficiency in the supply of money might affect comparative value in some degree, but drastic upsets were caused by non-monetary factors, such as wars, crop failures, over-expansion of business and tariffs.

In Canada trading was carried on with two kinds of money. The first was legal tender which (apart from coinage) consisted of notes issued by the Bank of Canada; that is, promises by that bank to pay a definite sum to the bearer on demand. These notes were issued against and fully covered by assets owned by the bank, which included gold and silver, securities and balances abroad. When the gold standard was in force, legal tender notes were redeemable in gold at the option of the holder, but at the present time in Canada, as in many other countries, the holder could not redeem them at all and they circulated and maintained their value, therefore, because the public had confidence in the Bank of Canada and because by law creditors must accept a settlement of debt offered in this form.

MISCONCEPTION OF FACT

The second kind was credit-money, commonly called bank-money. "Those bank-money obligations," he said, "are not legal tender but are acknowledgments of debt given by the respective banks and their promise to pay that debt in legal tender whenever the holder or owner of an obligation asks that this be done. Bank-money — like legal tender — rests upon and is fully covered by assets owned by the various banks. It will thus be seen that the credit-out-of-thin-air theory is founded on a complete misconception of fact. Bank-money is created by every payment which a chartered bank makes in its own notes and every deposit entered on its books, whether received over the counter or credited by the bank to someone who has been granted a loan or has sold securities to the bank. Conversely bank-money is extinguished when a bank redeems any of its outstanding obligations in legal tender, when it sells any of its security holdings and when bank-money is used by a borrower as a payment on his loan. I would impress upon you that the creation of bank-money is a totally different thing from the creation of wealth. The bank-money received by a borrower when granted a loan does not increase his wealth by one penny, for it is fully offset by the debt he has incurred to the bank. It does, however, enable him to carry on his business and thus to contribute to the creation of new wealth by his enterprise and activity."

A bank loan was in reality an exchange of the borrower's credit, effective only where he is known, for the credit of the bank in the form of bank-money, known and accepted everywhere.

The record of Canadian banks since Confederation for redeeming their promises promptly has been so satisfactory that bank-money in this country is unhesitatingly accepted as readily as legal tender.

Pointing out the need of sufficient margin of liquid assets over liabilities, Mr. Logan said that he wished to emphasize a fact which could not be stated too often, that the paramount duty of every bank was to keep the deposits entrusted to it safe and available for withdrawal by their owners; all other activities, including that of making loans, had to be subordinated to this obligation.

DENIES LOAN CHARGES

Answering the charge that banks had delayed the return of prosperity by denying loans to would-be borrowers possessed of credit warranting accommodation, he said, "While I freely admit that in the difficult task of estimating the credit standing of a client, bankers—who are no more than human—have made errors, I flatly deny the general truth of these charges for I am convinced that the number of cases where any legitimate claim for a loan has been refused is far exceeded by the number of those where loans have been made to the banker's loss. The banker has at all times a strong inducement—that of increased income—to keep his investments at the lowest point and his loans at the highest point commensurate with the safety of his depositors. That inducement is at present doubly powerful for he has a larger proportion of his funds in liquid investments—chiefly Government obligations—than ever before, while the average return on such investments is now lower than at any time within a generation. Since this is so, does it appeal to your common sense as probable that a banker will deliberately refuse to make a loan where the exchange of the bank's credit for that of the borrower is warranted? Is it not evident, rather, that those possessed of the necessary credit, seeing no opportunity under existing conditions to make a profit by exchanging it for bank-credit, refrain from borrowing, and that it is this fact which is the principal cause of the decrease in total loans."

In conclusion he pointed out that the present monetary system was an intricate machine built up gradually on the experience of many generations and adjusted from time to time to meet changing circumstances.

Before we discard the machinery which has served us in the past let us at least be sure that we are not grasping at a shadow and losing the substance, he ended.

The General Manager was followed by the President, Sir John Aird, who reviewed the business situation in Canada and other countries. As Canada was now entering the fourth year of the business revival, she had a fair prospect of a broader and more regular advance than had been enjoyed for some time, the main qualification being the international tension in Europe and the Far East. The revival had been extended since midsummer to the heavy industries, including construction.

Of equal importance was the improvement in farm purchasing power, in spite of crop damage in the West.

MINING SITUATION BRIGHT

Turning to the mining situation, Sir John said: "Widespread benefits have been derived from a gold production which has risen in value from less than 40 million dollars in 1929 to over 100 million dollars in 1935, exceeding the output I forecasted a few years ago.

Mining and forestry had been instrumental in raising Canada's export trade as a whole to the highest value since 1930. The metallurgical and marketing branches of mining had undergone a remarkable transformation, while minerals, lumber and newsprint were finding wider markets.

On the subject of the increasing trend towards state intervention in business, as compared with conditions before the war, Sir John said: "You are aware of the various expedients, under government tutelage, which have been undertaken as protective measures, ranging from a vast array of trade restrictions to price fixing, commodity destruction, monetary manipulation and elaborate programmes of non-productive public works. As a result of these policies there is now a rigidity in the economic system which might easily bring about a permanent sub-normal standard of living throughout the world. The lesson from this would seem to be that natural forces should now be allowed freer play if the world is to recapture its former economic flexibility. So governments might well decide to avoid further obstructive intervention in the spheres of commerce and finance and thus permit business enterprise to generate new productive and trading activities enuring to the common advantage of all classes of their communities."

CANADIAN CREDIT MAINTAINED

The maintenance of Canadian credit during these years had been very gratifying. It was important for Canada to be scrupulous in this regard if she was in future to be sure of the influx of capital required for her development.

"As long as there exists uncertainty or distrust respecting such vital matters as world peace, stabilization of currencies, industrial relations, the attitude of governments towards private business and good faith as to public contractual obligations, permanent improvement in world affairs is impossible. Without that confidence, which is the moral and hence the most powerful influence in business, and indeed in all relations between man and man and of nation with nation, both domestic and international economic conditions must remain unsatisfactory and disturbing. With it all things can be accomplished," he concluded.

School Hopes To Remain Outside Aberhart Plan

ERSKINE, Jan. 15—In spite of the cold stormy day and the icy roads about forty ratepayers turned out to the annual meeting of Erskine school, No. 1493. G. Bergman was elected chairman of the meeting and Harry Welch, secretary of the school, acted as secretary.

T. J. Braams was re-elected trustee and also chairman of the board again, by acclamation.

The meeting expressed its thanks to him for splendid services rendered and were gratified that he could assure them from being in touch with the department of education, that Erskine district would not be included in the proposed larger unit.

The chairman's report disclosed the fact that the three-room school was run on less than $4,000 for the past year, which was the least for all the years the school has been operated. Inspector Hay's report gave a favorable report of the teachers. The school district is in good financial shape with $2,000 in the savings bank and $2,000 for current expenses, which will pay all expenses to the close of the school year.

It was decided to use $1,000 of the two thousand in the savings bank and lower the mill rate from 8 to 5 mills, also to add a fourth room to the school next year and raise the janitor's and secretary's salaries.

COAL BEING HAULED

BAWLF, Jan. 15.—George Henkel made a trip to Hanson's coal mine on Battle River, Saturday. Much coal is being hauled from the mines in this locality. Motor trucks had monopolized the markets, but since the roads have drifted horses have come into use once more.

Red Cross At Pouce Elects New Officers

POUCE COUPE, B.C., Jan. 15.—The annual meeting of the Pouce Coupe Red Cross Society was held in Murphy's Hall. In spite of twenty below zero weather, a dreary sky and a nasty wind blowing between eighty and one hundred members turned out to hear the reports and to elect oficers for the coming year.

The reports showed that the Pouce Coupe hospital, main activity of the local society, had a very successful year.

Officers elected for the year 1930 were president, Dr. W. A. Watson; vice-president, Thomas Jamieson; treasurer, Mrs. J. O. Beauline; executive committee, A. J. Caldwell, E. J. Tucker and Mrs. H. M. Stacey. These were all elected unanimously and with the exception of Mr. Tucker were all members of the 1935 board. Miss Ida S. Cook was re-appointed secretary-supervisor.

The meeting was representative, members being present from all parts of the district from Shearerdale-Doe River, 26 miles to the north to Swan Lake, twenty miles south; from Sunset Prairie, 35 miles west to Bonanza in Alberta to the east.

Schade for the splendid work of the fire department in Mr. Schade's recent fire. As this is the thirtieth anniversary of the Daysland fire brigade, a masquerade dance will be held on February 12.
